DEPARTURE OF MR. CROOK.

PRESENTATIONS MADE AT QUEEN'S COLLEGE.

WARM APPRECIATION.

"If, 28 years ago I had had the money, I should probably have gone back Home from Hongkong by the first boat, the first one that could have carried me; but since that time I have changed a good deal and probably circumstances have changed in this college, and now I need not tell you that it is a great wrench to me to go away."

With these words Mr. A. H. Crook, the popular headmaster of Queen's College, addressed the students yesterday, when he bade them farewell prior to his departure for Home leave from which he may not return to Hongkong.

The whole school, together with the staff, which included Mr. Kay, the second master and Mr. F. J. de Rome, the future Headmaster of the College, assembled in the Great Hall. The gifts were a blackwood joss table, inlaid with stained wood and bearing the inscription on a silver plate, "Presented to A. H. Crook, Esq., by the students of Queen's College, on the occasion of his leaving Hongkong, March 1930."

A second gift was a bronze incense burner, and a third a beautiful blackwood tray with trestle, inlaid with silver, bearing the same inscription as the table.

Mr. W. Kay said they were assembled that afternoon to wish Mr. Crook a good voyage and a very pleasant holiday in England. At the present Mr. Crook did not know whether he would be coming back or not, but they hoped he would. If Mr. Crook did not come back there were two things they were certain of. Mr. Crook would always take an interest in Queen's College and Queen's College would never forget Mr. Crook.

Good-bye to A Friend.

It was now more than 27 years since Mr. Crook came to the school, and as second and headmaster there, Mr. Crook had been very popular with the teachers and boys. They were saying good-bye to a friend. When Mr. Tanner went away many people shook their heads and said that Queen's College would never have such a popular man, but Mr. Crook had proved just as popular as Mr. Tanner. If Mr. Crook did not come back to Hongkong, then Queen's College would lose a great headmaster and Hongkong would lose a very great scholar.

Mr. Crook had looked after their learning, sports, health and behaviour. If Mr. Crook did come back then he was sure to get a good welcome, and if he did not return, then they hoped he would have many useful and happy years with his own family in the Old Country.

They had with them that afternoon the gentleman who was to take Mr. Crook's place, Mr. F. J. de Rome. As most of them knew, Mr. de Rome had for several years been headmaster of the Ellis Kadoorie School. Before Mr. de Rome went there he taught in Queen's College, so that he was no stranger. A better successor to Mr. Crook could not be found. He was sure, under the leadership of Mr. de Rome, Queen's College would continue to flourish in the future as in the past. He would not say more, but would ask the Head Prefect of the College, as their representative, to perform a pleasant duty.

Presentation Made.

The head prefect, then presented to Mr. Crook, on behalf of the college, the gifts already mentioned. He said: It gives me the greatest pleasure this afternoon on behalf of my fellow-students to ask you to accept the joss-table, the tea tray and the incense-burner, as a token of our great regard and esteem.

The presents have been subscribed for by the students of the school and in asking you to accept them we feel how inadequate they are to express our gratitude to you. Although they are of small value, yet, if gifts are valued according to the feelings of the givers, then we hope that you will take them home with you for the sake of the sentiments behind them.

It is difficult for us to express in words our appreciation of what you have done for us during your term of office. We realise that you have always maintained a lofty aim of education, not merely to produce efficient clerks and business men, but to realise the initiative and inspiration of Art, Literature and Science.

Warm Tributes.

Your being chosen as Hongkong's representative at the Pan Pacific Science Congress proved your great scientific knowledge, and your winning such an honour as the O.B.E. shows your sound personal character and public worth. You have endeared yourself to us all by your never-failing kindness and consideration, as well as by your sympathy and cheerfulness—qualities which will make you friends wherever you go.

Our presence in the Hall this afternoon, is a sufficient proof of how we feel towards you. In bidding you "bon voyage and a happy holiday," we experience mingled feelings of joy and sorrow—joy because you are going home to enjoy a well-earned leave among your people, sorrow because we will miss you during your absence. We feel, still more sad, when you say your coming back is not certain. But at any rate, we hope that you will have a very happy time at home, and that amidst the tranquil surroundings of your home, you will always remember Queen's College in which you have spent the best part of your life.

Mr. Crook, on behalf of my fellow students I now ask you to accept these little presents with our deepest gratitude and our best wishes for a very pleasant voyage and a very happy holiday.

Mr. Crook Replies.

This, together with Mr. Kay's speech, was translated into the vernacular, after which Mr. Crook acknowledged the presents in the following words:

Mr. Kay, colleagues, head prefect and boys of Queen's College.

If about 28 years ago—I tell you this as a secret, or very nearly so—if about that time I had had the money I should probably have gone back from Hongkong by the first boat the first one that could have carried me. But since that time I have changed a good deal and probably circumstances have changed in this College and now I need not tell you that this is a great wrench for me to go away.

The circumstances naturally bring me to own again that I feel I have earned, after so long a time at the College a certain amount of leave, which I shall take, as now I am getting to that age when most Europeans cease to work. When they get old they cease to work, and I am getting near to that age and I suppose I ought to think of ceasing work. Possibly on that account I might find it necessary not to return to Hongkong again. But as I said at the Prefect's dinner some time ago there is that old saying "A bad sixpence always turns up," and you never know when you might see me again even before you expect me. I thank you most sincerely for those lovely presents which you have given me and I need not say that I shall treasure them and keep them to recall to my mind Queen's College as long as I live. But I am sure to remember Queen's College even if I had no particular token of that kind by which to remember it. I have spent, as the head prefect has said, the best part of my life here in this college.

Deep Attachments.

I came originally in this hall probably before any of you boys

I thank you, not only for the very kind words, but for the kindness I have received here from you during my time as headmaster, and before that as second master. I hope to hear, when I am at Home, not only of your progress, but of better successes than any which you have had in the past and I hope that in sport and in work you will be more successful than any successes won previously and that you will endeavour to the best of your ability to keep up the good name and reputation of this Colony. A high honour has been conferred on Mr. Kay, for which I am sorry and glad in some ways. I am sorry Mr. Kay is also about to leave you, as he has been promoted headmaster of the Ellis Kadoorie. DEPARTURE OF MR. CROOK.

but though I am so far away from you I shall know that he will look after and support the interests of this college so far as he can. He has taken a great interest in this college and has been the spirit and life in many ways of things like the Yellow Dragon. I ask you to rise and give three cheers and a "Tiger" for him.

After the school had risen and given the cheers, Mr. Crook continued: Now there is just one other thing I want to say to you. There is here on my left my successor, Mr. de Rome. I need hardly introduce him to you. A good many of you need no introduction, for numbers of you come from the Ellis Kadoorie school and know Mr. de Rome well. I feel sure that the College will be more and more successful and will be well looked after under Mr. de Rome's charge.

New Headmaster.

Mr. de Rome then addressed the school, when he said that that was a most unfortunate day for Queen's College, because they were losing not only Mr. Crook, but Mr. Kay as well, which meant not only the head, but the shoulders. He referred to Mr. Crook, as not only a headmaster but friend, and added that if he came back again, which they felt sure he would, they would all be very glad. He could assure them that he (Mr. de Rome) would do his best to follow in the steps of such a popular headmaster as Mr. Crook, and to cherish the high reputation of Queen's College. He would try to keep it up to its present standard and when his time came to hand over to somebody else, he hoped that nobody would be able to say that he had let Queen's College down. He appealed to the boys to remember that the headmaster, and staff did not compose a school. The school was composed of the boys, and it was for them to do all they could to help the teachers in their work, by working hard themselves.

The proceedings terminated with hearty cheers and a "Tiger" for Mr. Crook and Mr. de Rome.

Mr. Crook's Career.

Mr. A. H. Crook, O.B.E., M.A., F.R.G.S., has had a long and varied career. He was born on December 3, 1873, being the youngest son of the late Rev. William Crook, D. D. Was educated at Wesley College and Trinity College, Dublin. He took the degree of M.A., and was a Gold Medalist in Natural History. In 1902 he was appointed junior master at Queen's College, Hongkong, arriving here in January the following year. He became senior assistant master in 1908 and acting headmaster in 1914. In 1917 he was appointed headmaster of Yau-tai School and returned to Queen's College as headmaster in 1926, a position he has held up to the present time.

He is an acknowledged authority on Natural History and was a lecturer in biology at the Hongkong College of Medicine from 1903-1912. He has rendered invaluable assistance to the Hongkong University. He was the founder of the Hongkong Naturalist the new local magazine, and now, just before his departure, he has published a most interesting and educative volume entitled "Flowering Plants of Hongkong," which is accompanied by many illustrations, the work of the author.

Mr. Crook's great work on behalf of local education was fittingly recognised when his name appeared in the New Year's Honours list, and he was awarded the Order of the British Empire decoration.

Mr. Crook leaves for England on board the P and O s.s. Kalyan at noon to-day, and the best wishes of the entire Colony for a happy and healthful holiday will accompany him.

Mr. F. de Rome assumes the headmastership of Queen's College on Monday next, and on the same day, Mr. W. Kay will take up a similar position at the Ellis Kadoorie school.

A SOLUTION FOUND?

REUNION OF PORTUGUESE COUPLE PROBABLE.

The prospect of an amicable settlement being arrived at between Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Soares was forthcoming when the maintenance claim brought by the wife was continued before Mr. Whyte Smith at the Kowloon Magistracy yesterday afternoon. It was intimated that the sister of the husband had voluntarily offered to leave the house.

Mr. J. T. Prior is for Mrs. B. J. Soares, while Mr. Leo d'Almada is appearing for Mr. Soares.

When the case was resumed, his Worship said he thought perhaps he should mention that Miss Soares, the defendant's sister, went to see him. He told her he did not want to discuss the case, but she replied that she did not wish to discuss the case except to say that she was willing to leave her brother's house, which would lead to a settlement of the affair. He told her she had no standing in the case and any offer would have to be made by the husband.

Mr. d'Almada replied that Miss Soares had seen him the previous day and told him she had been to his Worship. What she had told him was that she was prepared to arrange to live elsewhere so that the husband and wife could come to an amicable settlement.

Mr. d'Almada mentioned that the husband in that event would welcome his wife back. He suggested that that was a solution to the proceedings. The obstacle between the husband and wife was going to be removed and removed by the obstacle itself.

Mr. d'Almada mentioned that as the sister had voluntarily offered to leave the premises, it relieved the defendant of the promise he had made his mother before her death that he and his sister should stay together.

Mr. Prior intimated that he would be glad to consider the proposal, but was afraid he could not do so at the moment.

The summons was accordingly adjourned for a week.

MUSICAL EVENING.

KOWLOON LADIES ARRANGE FIRST CONCERT.

The large attendance last evening at the first musical entertainment arranged by the newly-opened Kowloon branch of the Helena May Institute, augured well for future functions of a similar nature, and gave the organisers the assurance that their efforts to cater for the needs of the ladies of the Peninsula are greatly appreciated.

As an initial attempt the organisers are to be congratulated on securing such excellent talent, thus providing a well-balanced programme. Mr. John Braga undoubtedly carried off the chief honours of the evening with his contributions on the violin. He acquitted himself well in his solo pieces, as well as in a trio and a quartette in which he took part.

The charming soprano voice of Madame Carola was heard to advantage in a number of songs which she rendered with the skill of an accomplished artiste, and she was greatly responsible for the success of the concert. It was the English songs which proved the more popular, and she had to give an encore.

Too much praise cannot be bestowed on Miss Carrie Braga for the very able manner in which she accompanied her brother and Madame Carola on the piano. Miss Braga also took part in the trio with Mr. Braga and Mrs. Arnold, while she was again heard in the grand finale, a quartette, with the trio artistes and Miss J. Braga.

LENINGRAD'S 'FRESH' EGGS.

A DELICACY FOR BOLSHEVIKS

Berlin, Feb. 13.

Great was the rejoicing in Leningrad when the municipal Soviet decided that every Communist Party member should receive an extra ration of two fresh eggs on Lenin Day.

Long queues awaited the distribution of the eggs, which were brought triumphantly home. A little stamp on a number of the eggs, however, a mysterious foreign word in gothic characters, caused some searchings of heart and questioning amongst the recipients. What did the strange device mean?

Someone learned in the German language deciphered it. It was

"zuruck," that is "return." The "fresh" eggs had been rejected by the Hamburg Customs authorities

some weeks before as unfit to be consumed by German citizens.

"HONGKONG NATURALIST"
NOW ISSUED

Hongkong residents, particularly those interested in natural history, have looked forward to the appearance of the "Hongkong Naturalist" ever since, several months ago, the first intimation was given of its preparation. The magazine—which is to be a quarterly—having duly appeared, one is able to judge better of the likelihood of its satisfying the needs of those for whom it is specially intended. The editors have wisely steered a middle course, interspersing matter written in popular style with more scientific material, but one ventures to question whether the man-in-the-street, who looks to the notes of a more "popular" kind, has been sufficiently catered for. It is, however, difficult to tell from a first issue what the scope of the future numbers is to be, so possibly the notes and comments section will be enlarged later. It is here that the co-operation of readers is necessary, and the appeal of the editors for intelligent aid from outside can be heartily endorsed.

Of the first issue, it can be said that it has proved encouraging to those who desire a collated account of our knowledge of various branches of local zoology and botany. One cannot know how the editors view the public response, but it is to be hoped that the required support will be sufficient to enable the publication to be kept up after the end of the year, as well as to be enlarged as time goes on.

In a preliminary account of the birds of Hongkong, by H. P. W. Hutson, there is a great deal of useful information, and it is pleasing to learn that the material now in course of publication is likely to appear in monograph form when completed. A most beautifully drawn representation of the Chinese crested mynah appears as a coloured plate, and the artist, Lieut. Commander A. M. Hughes, R.N., deserves great credit.

It is a pity that the first section of a description of local orchids, by G.A.C. Herklots, includes some very poor plates, but fortunately there are other illustrations, including line drawings, of real merit, and these serve to enhance the value of Dr. Herklots' most interesting contribution, which many will hope to see continued until it forms a complete popular guide to the local Orchidaceae. One comments the author's reticence regarding the locality of the Cypripedium specimens he has discovered, as it has of late years become a too-common practice for ramblers to uproot plants that, in many cases, they do not know how to cultivate, so that this particular orchid has become comparatively scarce.

A section on the ferns of Hongkong, also illustrated, is contributed by G. A. C. Herklots and L. Gibbs; and a valuable paper on Chinese fishes, with drawings in the text, comes from Henry W. Fowler, of the Philadelphia Academy of Natural Sciences. In the notes and comments reference is made to the interesting attempt of a pair of Barbets to nest in a tree in the Botanical Gardens, though they were frustrated by adverse weather conditions. The illustrations here are unfortunately of poor quality.

A great deal of interesting information on the dates of appearance of various species of birds in Hongkong is included, with a request for data from readers. One gathers that the "Naturalist" was intended to appear at the beginning of the year, as the observations called for in the earlier months cannot now be made. However, much is to be learned from co-operative note-taking, and it is to be hoped the response will be as great as the producers of Hongkong's first natural history journal deserve to have. Their venture is, having regard to the well-known local apathy as soon as anything has lost its newness, a bold one; but their preliminary effort is excellent, and merits every support.—V. J.

THE TRUTH ABOUT THE RAILWAY.

The term "unenumerated by fact" is one which would appear eminently suitable to apply to the investigation of the affairs of the Canton-Kowloon Railway, recently carried out by Mr. John J. Mantell, the American adviser to the Nanking Ministry of Railways. In the course of his report, of which we gave some extracts yesterday, Mr. Mantell takes it upon himself to describe as "inequitable" the agreement between the Chinese and British sections relating to the division of revenue. He goes further and states that agreements of this type do not tend to promote close co-operation between Chinese and foreign interests, and urges that the matter be taken up with the British authorities with a view to a fairer adjustment being made. As we hope to show, not only is he sadly astray in some of his statements, but, what is more amazing still, in the course of his visit to the South he never even approached the officials of the British section of the line, from whom he could have obtained information which would have put a totally different complexion on the matter. In passing, it is somewhat curious to note that Mr. Mantell has apparently, in the course of his investigation of Chinese railways, confined himself solely to lines in which foreign interests are involved.

Let us come to Mr. Mantell's assertions, and see how they square with the facts. The burden of his complaint is that whereas the British section constitutes only 20 per cent. of the mileage of the railway, "it insists on receiving 35 per cent. of the revenue, although it contributes only 20 per cent. of the equipment." Passing over the use of the word "insists" with the remark that the arrangement is in full accord with the terms of the working agreement entered into after account had been taken of all the factors, what is the inference which would naturally be drawn from Mr. Mantell's observations? Obviously, that 80 per cent. of the rolling stock is provided by the Chinese section. How utterly at variance with the facts that is, we all know. It would be far nearer the truth to reverse the figures. Indeed, but for the provision of equipment by the British Section, the maintenance of through traffic would be an absolute impossibility. It is common knowledge that, for lengthy periods, due to civil war and the interference of military factions, the express service on the railway has had to be suspended. After the last such occasion, such locomotives as were still intact on the Chinese sections were in such a pitiable state that they could not possibly be used; the same could be said of the waggons and other rolling-stock. Owing to labour troubles, the Chinese authorities were unable to effect repairs, with the result that practically all the equipment of the section had to be sent into the British yards for complete reconditioning. The state in which some of the rolling-stock arrived here is almost beyond imagination. Even to-day, all express trains to and from Canton have to be hauled by British engines, which have had to be coupled up to specially-built water tanks on good waggons, as they were originally intended only for operation on the relatively short section of the British line. On special occasions, also, the whole train has to be made up from rolling stock belonging to the British section. It is true that Canton pays for the hire of such equipment, under the terms of the agreement, but the point to be kept in mind is that the British section has to meet the capital outlay on extra equipment, pay interest and maintenance charges, and find accommodation which under normal conditions it would not be required to provide. These facts, which Mr. Mantell might easily have ascertained had he taken the trouble to call on the British authorities, are sufficient to show that, so far from being unduly favoured under existing conditions, the British section still bears the brunt of maintaining the service between Canton and Kowloon.

On the question of division of revenues being based on mileage, Mr. Mantell conveniently overlooks the physical characteristics of the two sections and the tremendously heavy capital expenditure which has fallen on the British section as a consequence. The long Beacon Hill tunnel and the large number of bridges account for this and they provide a striking contrast to conditions on the Chinese portion of the railway. In the United Kingdom, at least, extra mileage is counted for all extraordinary engineering work of this type. There is one other point which has somehow escaped Mr. Mantell's notice, namely, the huge sum now owing by the Chinese section to the British on account of suspension of through joint sectional traffic, hire of rolling stock and demurrage. This must now be close on a million dollars, if not more. That this money is due under the terms of the agreement, which still remains in force, there can be no question. Perhaps even Mr. Mantell would agree that a settlement of this claim is far more urgent and reasonable than any readjustment of the present division of revenue. At any rate, that is the viewpoint of the Hongkong ratepayer, so much of whose money has gone towards the incurring of obligations for which this Colony ought, strictly speaking, not to have been rendered liable.

The Tariff Issue.

The Conservative vote of censure went down to inevitable defeat and it was just as well. The country is not in the mood to thank any party which precipitates a General Election this year. The debate was interesting in several respects. Mr. Stanley Baldwin advanced a peculiarly unconvincing argument on the tariff issue. Mr. Philip Snowden with a militant air of refusing to budge an inch, managed to convey a hint that the McKenna Duties will not be removed on Budget Day. Sir Herbert Samuel struck very close to the truth when he attributed the prevalence of business uncertainty to the bringing of the tariff question to the floor of the House of Commons. Business men are inherently gamblers. If the motor firms had undertaken their business programme for the present year on the basis that the McKenna Duties were to come off, the industrial position would have shown greater strength than is evident at the moment. A retention of the Duties would have further brightened their outlook. Instead, they appear to have made a bugbear of the business, just as Lancashire declines to buy cotton at a low price because it may go lower, and China's export trade is at a standstill because traders are waiting to witness the spectacle of the dollar striking rock bottom. It may be the normal attitude, but it is not a helpful one. As to Mr. Baldwin's fear that Britain will be left in the cold when tariff reductions in Europe are under consideration, it seems rather curious. If the countries of Europe really intend to reduce competing tariffs, it is inconceivable that they will impose a much bigger wall against a Free Trade Great Britain than against the products of other countries with whom they may frame tariff agreements. Any tendency to reduction in tariffs whether or not Britain is directly concerned in the negotiations should allow British products to compete on a more advantageous basis. And that is all the opportunity that the rationalisation campaign needs.

The Return of Eunice.By Elinor Slim.

We left Biggs telling the story of Percy's pyjamas and we find him still at it. As previously stated, the characters are purely imaginary.

CHAPTER VI: AN EARTH-QUAKE!

Percy found the dinner party somewhat disorganised. There were only two people in the dining room. Frascati and the Consul. The Consul was under the table, while Frascati was walking round and round waiting for him to come out.

Every time Scheldthauer put his head out between the chairs, Frascati made a wild swipe at it with a magnum of champagne that he had in his hand.

Percy couldn't stop to make enquiries as he had to get to Mrs. Frascati who was on the verandah still shrieking. There he found the rest of the party trying to calm her. Some of the ladies were sprinkling her with "4711" and "Quelques Fleurs," while one bright lad, who meant well but hadn't much experience, was doing his best to get her to sniff a bottle of bath salts.

Percy soon brought her round and then went in to the dining room to call off Frascati who was still doing his stuff with the champagne bottle. He persuaded him that it would be better to drink the champagne than waste it on Scheldthauer's head, and within a few minutes, peace was declared, and everybody was friends again.

"But what was all the trouble about?" asked Kuttle. "And what about the silk pyjamas, how did he do he come to lose them?"

"I'm just getting to that part," answered Biggs. "No one seems to be very clear about the cause of all the trouble. It started out of some political argument apparently. The ladies joined in, and before anyone knew what was happening Mrs. Frascati went into hysterics. Her husband blamed Scheldthauer, and made a rush at him and then the battle began."

Percy got the men to shake hands, but Mrs. Frascati declared she couldn't sleep under the same roof as Mrs. Scheldthauer, and asked him to take her away.

So he arranged to take her to the M'Clusky's to share a bed with his wife, and promised to return to stay the night with Frascati. Mrs. M'Clusky wasn't too pleased at having Mrs. Frascati saddled upon her, but she couldn't turn her out at that time of night, and after he had tucked them all in and said "Goodnight" Percy gathered up his pyjamas and toothbrush and whatnot, and went back to the Consul's. Unfortunately, by the time he got there he found the place in darkness. They had forgotten about him, and were all in bed fast asleep.

He tried to get back into the M'Clusky's again, but they were all in bed too and he couldn't wake up anyone there. That left him stranded and the only thing he could do was to try and get back to his own house which was more than a mile away. He didn't like the prospect of a lonely stroll through the town at two in the morning, with soldiers at every street corner, ready to shoot at sight, but there was nothing else to be done. He lives in a big compound with high gates, and as he expected, he found his gatekeeper sound asleep. After ten minutes of banging and shouting he gave up trying to waken him and decided to climb over the wall. He managed to scramble over somehow and then opened the gate to get his pyjamas and things which he had left on the ledge outside. They were gone and there was not a soul in sight. Wasn't that bad luck?

"A coolie had pinched them I suppose," said Kuttle sympathetically. "Yes, or one of the troops. I think he was lucky not to lose more than his pyjamas. He might have lost his life." "He must be a brave man," said Eunice, "and I think Mrs. Frascati or the other woman ought to present him with a new pair." "That's what we all said, and he's been promised a pair by each of them. When he gets them we're going to have a special dance in the club to celebrate it. Everybody in pyjamas. It will be great fun."

"Tiffin ready, master." This was the third time the boy had announced that tiffin was ready, and on this occasion Biggs took some notice of him. The cocktail shaker was given a last shake and the few drops of melted ice were poured into Kuttle's glass and hastily swallowed, while Eunice led the way to the dining room. The meal was plain but well cooked. Chaomoy cooks are famous, and in places like Hongkong where good cooks are scarce they command huge wages.

Eunice was hungry after her morning in the open air and enjoyed the food. Tomato soup, not out of a tin, but made from fresh tomatoes. Fried fish, followed by spaghetti, which she managed very well, having had plenty of practice on the journey out, and then a sort of Irish stew made of beef, onions, carrots and potatoes all boiled together. The sweet consisted of banana fritters, which she did not take much interest in. Nothing much was said during the meal and it had barely finished before Biggs asked to be excused as he had to rush off to the office. "Busy?" said Kuttle.

"No. Nothing doing at all, but I like to set a good example to the juniors. There's a mail in though, and that means a new batch of forms to fill up for the Hongkong office. Cheerio." He shook hands with Eunice. "Good-bye for now, Mrs. Kuttle. I think you'll like Chaomoy when you get to know everybody."

Eunice would have liked an afternoon alone to think things over, but Chubby had decided to take the rest of the day off to install her into the house and hand over the housekeeping. But neither felt inclined to hurry away from the mess, and at Kuttle's suggestion they retired to the verandah to rest for a while before starting out for their new home. He chose a comfortable chair and was soon fast asleep while Eunice sat and pondered over all she had heard.

Chaomoy was very different from Hongkong. It was, as she had said, cosmopolitan. The "get together" spirit seemed to be well in evidence. She was very pleased now that she would be able to say she had travelled on the Continent. But what strange people one would have to meet. Just like those Mrs. Gherkin used to tell her about.

What was she going to do here? How was she going to get Chubby out of the bad habits he seemed to be falling back into. What a nice man Mr. Biggs was. What a pity she hadn't met him before she met Kuttle. How red her husband's nose looked as he sat snoring softly in the chair. Yet she liked him and was glad she was back with him again. She hoped the house was as nice as this one, but she didn't like having the firm's initials all over everything. "O.P.C." on the plates. "O.P.C." on the bed linen. "O.P.C." from morning to night. She wouldn't like that. Yet it was expensive, paying for everything oneself. So, her mind wandered on, her hand playing gently over the events of the past few hours.

Her eyes closed and her breathing became faintly audible. Eunice slept.

"Eunice! Eunice! Wake up. Wake up, Wake up." Her husband was shaking her roughly by the shoulder. There was a sound of breaking glass and a dull roar like thunder. She (Continued on Page 7.)

WHO WAS SOAMES FORSYTE.

"The Man of Property" is the author's own description of Soames Forsyte, the "hero" of John Galsworthy's novel, "The Forsyte Saga," and its sequels. The Forsyte family rose to affluence by virtue of a strong possessive instinct, and Soames Forsyte inherited more than his share of the family trait. Beneath a cold, precise exterior he cherished an insatiable passion for possession, and thought of everything in terms of property, with the result that his life was a long series of disappointments.

His first wife, an exceptionally beautiful woman, left him, his second wife came to hate him, and even his adored daughter Fleur did not return his affection as he desired. All with whom he came into contact resented Soames' attitude. And the material beauty with which he surrounded himself always seemed to him tantalisingly elusive, unpossessable.

So that although he was wealthy, cultured, upright, a "safe" man, and a just man, Soames Forsyte is one of the unhappiest and most tragic figures in all literature.

MODERN MOTOR SERVICE.

CURRENT COMMENT

Last Sunday's Trial.

Considerable interest was created amongst local motor cyclists in last Sunday's trial, to determine whether a rider of sufficient merit could be selected to represent Hongkong at this year's T. T. Races in the Isle of Man. Five motor cyclists competed over the course between Tylam and Wong Nei Chung, and observers were posted at various points along the course. At the start, riders were informed that speeding was not desired, the intention being to judge riding ability and style. Even so, we learn that the observers were unanimous in their opinion that none of the competitors displayed the enterprise expected of a rider capable of taking his place amongst the world's crack riders in the T. T. events. Judged from the point of view of every-day riding, the standard displayed was high, but taken from a more critical standpoint in view of the gruelling work imposed in the famous Isle of Man events, we understand that it is doubtful whether the Hongkong Automobile Association will care to accept the responsibility of sending a rider to England from those who competed last Sunday. The track was certainly a difficult one, but it might have been taken at a higher speed with safety, and the observers were of the opinion that any expert rider would have displayed far more enterprise and ability in cornering. When it is fully realised that a man selected would have to compete with super-experts, it is clearly seen that unusual ability would have to be shown in any preliminary trial, and, as we mention above, the observers were of the opinion that such ability was not revealed.

Canton's Roads.

During recent years, very considerable development has taken place in building motor thoroughfares in and around Canton. The local authorities are fully alive to the beneficial influence of motor transportation, and the work so far achieved reflect the greatest credit on those responsible. We learn from the Public Works Department of Canton, that during the last six months, over twenty miles of motor roads have been built, and it is gratifying to know that road-building forms a most important part of the progressive policy being followed. Whether an effort will be made to link Canton to Hongkong by a motor thoroughfare is not known at the moment, but we have reason to believe that the Canton authorities are not at all unmindful of the mutual benefit which would be derived. Many Hongkong residents would welcome the opportunity to motor through to Canton, and closer contact would be established as a result. It is reasonably safe to predict that the time will come when communication will be established by road, but the only question is, when will that desirable state of affairs become a reality?

Diesel Car Engine.

Tremendous interest has been caused among motorists and also in aviation and motor-boating circles at Home by the news of the secretly built British high-speed engine working on the Diesel principle and using heavy oil.

This engine, built in the Sunbeam works at Wolverhampton, is the result of years of experiment and has been designed by Mr. Louis Coatalen, who is also the designer of the Silver Bullet car in which Mr. Kaye Don is to attempt to beat the world's land speed record.

Mr. Coatalen recently stated that he will take the oil engine to the United States with him when the speed attempt is made. He regrets he has not had time to put this type of engine in the Silver Bullet.

ENGLAND'S NEW LAWS.

Penalties for Reckless Driving.

AGE LIMIT.

London, Feb. 5.

England's new traffic and motor law in the short time of two months has shown remarkable results. Although termed drastic by many, it is producing results that heretofore lax laws failed in bringing about. And this despite the fact that there is no speed limit for motor cars.

One reason for the success of the law, according to traffic experts, is the clause requiring all drivers to obtain a driver's licence. This licence is issued only with certain specifications. Most important of these is that which requires the applicant to make a declaration as to whether or not he is suffering from any mental disease or physical ailment which would cause the vehicle under his control to be a danger to the public.

The new law sets the age limit for driving automobiles at 17. A new clause provides for punishment in case of reckless driving. Racing on public roads is prohibited. Compulsory third-party insurance is provided for. Hopping on a moving vehicle is considered a crime.

Under the compulsory insurance clause, it is provided that the company or underwriters issuing the policy of insurance or the bond shall furnish their client with a "certificate of insurance," or a "certificate of security," as the case may be. This certificate will be a statement to the effect that the person owning or driving the vehicle has either effected a policy of insurance or obtained a bond which covers the minimum statutory requirements in respect of personal injury to third parties.

The law says that an intoxicated driver shall be imprisoned for not less than four months, fined $200, or both.

As Good as Petrol.

"I could easily convert the present 12-cylinder petrol engines in the Silver Bullet to my type of heavy-oil engine," said Mr. Coatalen. "I am convinced they would behave as well, and that I could get as much speed as with the petrol type."

"It would only be necessary to change the cylinder heads and put the fuel valve in the place now occupied by the sparking plug. Perhaps at some future date I shall be able to use the heavy-oil engine for attempts to create records."

Captain Malcolm Campbell, the racing driver, said engines of this type would be invaluable, particularly for motor-boats and air work, as they would eliminate the danger of fire.

Rustless Steel.

Will rustless steel take the place of plating on the cars of the future?

Two years ago a famous American firm introduced untarnishable plating on its cars. Within a year this type of plating had swept through America, and it is being extensively used in England.

Mr. Henry Ford has now started America with a new type of finish for the bright parts of his 1930 Fords. He uses rustless steel on radiator, lamps, scuttle strips, hub caps, and rear light, and in America experts are predicting that this will largely replace the untarnishable plating which has become so popular.

At least one famous British firm has been experimenting with stainless steel for the bright parts of its cars for some time.

JOHANNESBURG TO PIETERSBURG.

The above pictures were taken on a petrol consumption run from Johannesburg to Pietersburg, South Africa. The car is a Pontiac which covered the distance of 221 miles on 5 1/2 gallons of petrol, an average of 27.6 miles to the gallon. In view of the difficult nature of the country covered, the performance was a remarkably good one.

BRAKES AND LAMPS.

Anti-Glare Laws.

U.S. LEGISLATION.

Chicago, Feb. 4.

In an effort to reduce the increasing annual auto death toll, many states have passed laws during their last legislative terms requiring additional protective measures to be taken by motorists.

Probably the two greatest physical causes of vehicle accidents are defective lights and faulty brakes, and these two causes were widely discussed and legislated during the past law-making terms of the states.

Nine state legislatures, according to the National Safety Council, revised previous laws or passed new ones requiring the testing of motor vehicle lights. Four states enacted brake testing laws. Besides these, three states gave their commissioners of motor vehicles the power to require inspection of all automobile equipment.

In Alabama laws were passed for the inspection of lenses; in California for auxiliary or fog lights; in Delaware for all lights; in Louisiana for all lights; in Minnesota for spot lights; in New Mexico for all lights; in South Dakota for all lights; in Virginia for dimming or "non-glare" devices; and in Washington for stop signals.

According to the National Safety Council, the previous law in Delaware required the testing of any light submitted by any manufacturer and a list made of those satisfactory. The new law makes it unlawful to sell any light that has not been tested and approved. The Louisiana law requires that all lights be tested before offered for sale, and that an owner must have his lights tested twice a year.

AT NEW YORK SHOW.

Many Innovations Displayed.

New York City was the Mecca for men in the automotive industry all over the world and thousands of United States dealers and motorists eager to learn what American automobile manufacturers have to offer in the way of innovations and improvements during the thirtieth annual National Automobile Show of America, January 4th to 11th.

Four beautifully decorated floors of the Grand Central Palace were filled with the exhibits of forty-six makes of passenger cars and the products of 180 accessory manufacturers.

The National Show is a most important event in the automotive calendar, being to people in the United States what the Paris and London shows are to Europeans. While a number of manufacturers had announced their plans for 1930 prior to the show, the bulk of the new models were exhibited for the first time at the New York Show. Two foreign builders, Mercedes-Benz and Voisin, also had exhibits. Many innovations appeared, both in the passenger car and accessory displays.

Among the makes of cars exhibited were: Auburn, Black Hawk, Buick, Cadillac, Chevrolet, Chrysler, Cord, Cunningham, DeSoto, Dodge Brothers, DuPont, Durant, Elcar, Erskine, Essex, Franklin, Gardner, Graham-Paige, Hudson, Hupmobile, Jordan, Kissel, LaSalle, Lincoln, Marmon, Marquette, Nash, Oakland, Oldsmobile, Packard, Peerless, Pierce-Arrow, Plymouth, Pontiac, Reo, Roosevelt, Ruxton, Studebaker, Stutz, Viking, Whippet, Willys-Knight and Windsor White, Prince (Moon).

More than a score of new chassis made their first appearance. Of these, half were eight cylinder types including Oakland's new V-eight. There were three makes of front wheel drive cars and a sixteen-cylinder Cadillac—the first American 16-cylinder car to be produced—which created a great deal of interest.

Aside from these radical changes there was introduced a number of important mechanical developments based on scientific research conducted on an elaborate scale. Among these improvements are found down-draft carburetion, producing more power through the downward flow of gasoline and air and fitting in with fuel pumps, which continue to replace vacuum tanks, increase in the bore, with its approach to the "square" type of cylinder dimension, and cooling of the oil by pumping it through a part of the radiator. On the whole, the new models are more powerful with greater acceleration, hill-climbing ability and maximum speed, improved comfort, better brakes, smarter body lines and more luxuriously furnished bodies.

Aside from the many mechanical improvements, the most striking tendencies are the recent developments in body design and colouring. Although the general trend is definitely toward more sombre shades, many unusual colour combinations have been achieved by employing contrasts between body colouring and trimming. The conservative influence is offset somewhat by the generous use of chromium plate. Also new alloyed metals are used from the wheels and body to the carburetor and engine, notably stainless steel to prevent rust and aluminum alloys for lightness and strength. There is an increased use of new "alloys" of rubber for engine mountings and elsewhere on the chassis to check vibration, in universal joint, steering gear, braking system, etc. One model carries more than 400 parts made of rubber.

With Chevrolet occupying the place of honour, General Motors lines had an important place in the exhibit of 325 models. First place at the Show is a much coveted honour and is determined by the value of gross sales of a member company during the fiscal year ending August 1st. This is the third consecutive year that Chevrolet has been awarded the premier position at the National Automobile Show, taking the lead in 1928 from Buick, another well-known General Motors product, which held it for the nine years previous.

Called in to make the 1930 car a thing of greater beauty, artists, interior decorators and jewellers have emphasized unity of design from the front bumper to the tail light. Hardware and trim carry the same motif out, with a marked tendency to have the decorative design in the style of modern art both inside and outside the car. Bullet-type lamps match cigar lighters, cigar lighters match door handles, handles match instrument panel and so on to the radiator cap, which plays a less conspicuous part on most models.

The attendance at the Show this year broke the record of last year. In expectation of an intensely competitive year, the executives and engineers of all the manufacturing companies were alertly on hand. The presidents and vice-presidents of companies spent more time in their booths than in any past year. A number of them were present so that they might personally observe the degree of interest manifested by visitors in the cars for which they are responsible. It is most important to them to know exactly how their cars appeal to the public.

Delegates to the Show from countries overseas were especially honoured on International Day, January 6th. Among the distinguished representatives were: Sir Herbert Austin of Great Britain, Giulio Faldella, President of the National Fascist Automobile Trade Board of Italy and C. A. Viriot of the Automobile Club de l'Ouest of France.

The opening of the Show was broadcast by radio over a nationwide network of 48 stations.

In addition to the principle show at the Grand Central Palace, General Motors had an exhibition of its own at the Hotel Astor which continued daily from 10 a.m. to midnight. Forty-eight General Motors passenger car models and 11 commercial vehicles were displayed in the Grand Ballroom and the Laurel and Rose Rooms of the Hotel.

ARRESTED TRANSPORT.

During 1929, American prohibition enforcement officers, in addition to arresting 66,878 people, seized cars valued at 2,879,013 dollars, and 89 boats valued at 200,845 dollars.

MOTOR AGE CITY.

Radical Planning.

BUILT-IN SAFETY.

The enormous volume of present-day street traffic caused by highly-developed motor transportation, and the many hazards to pedestrians resulting therefrom, are reflected in American city planning and house-building.

In the State of New Jersey, for instance, a new town, Radburn, which is called the "City of the Motor Age," is being built on an unusual plan as a solution to the pressing traffic and safety problems.

Separate Roadways.

The Radburn plan provides for separate footpaths for pedestrians, distinct from the roadways on which motor vehicles travel. Large parks, where youngsters and grown-ups can walk and play in safety, occupy the centre of each super-block. Children can go to school or into the park without crossing a street used for vehicular traffic.

Each Radburn house has two means of access, a motor entrance and a garden entrance. Friends arriving by car as well as the grocer, the milkman, the coalman—all who drive—go to the motor entrance by way of short closed-end streets around which the houses are grouped. An entrance on the other side of the house opens on the garden, at the end of which is a path for those coming on foot. This path forms part of the park system, while the short closed-end streets lead to broad traffic avenues.

Traffic is Outside.

A number of these closed streets, with the houses, which are grouped around them, form a block many times the size of the ordinary city block, with traffic avenues at its boundaries and a long park strip in the centre.

In blocks now being built the parks are joined by an underpass where they are crossed by a traffic street.

DIRECTING TRAFFIC IN MALAYA

The majority of Hongkong residents will be quite familiar with the means of traffic control illustrated above. The photo was taken at Singapore where the control of traffic presents quite a difficult problem.

HUMAN SIGNAL.

Night drivers in busy cities will have no trouble with indistinct semaphore signals operated by policemen at less busy corners if a new traffic device is adopted. The one shown here on Officer Herman Winters is being tried out in Detroit. It consists of a harness fitting over the shoulders, green lights being fitted on the shoulders and red lights on front and back. To change the run of traffic the policeman blows his whistle and makes a quarter turn. Batteries on the officer's back feed the lights.

DELICATE GOLD.

Speed Trophy.

TWO YEARS' WORK.

The gold trophy for the world's speed record, presented by Lord Wakefield, of Hythe, to the R.A.C., is now practically completed. The work of making it has been in hand for more than two years, as great technical difficulties have been experienced by the goldsmiths.

It is over 300 years since a gold casting has been made of such size and delicacy.

The donor is determined that the trophy shall be as perfect as British craftsmen can make it. The work has been supervised by a joint committee composed of the Royal Mint Advisory Committee and the Committee of Taste, appointed by the Worshipful Company of Goldsmiths. The latter chose the design, "The Spirit of Speed," by Mrs. Harold Stabler.

There silver replicas of the trophy are completed, and the first will be despatched to Captain Malcolm Campbell, the second to the executor of the late Ray Keck, and the third to Sir Henry Seagrave, the present holder. In addition to the trophy, Lord Wakefield also presents a cheque for £1000 for three years to the holder.

Four Fashions for Spring

Styles of early March point the way towards an interesting Easter of color and elegance

I. Henri Bendel uses pleated ruffles to form a cape sleeve on this afternoon frock of printed blue.

II. taffeta-bound petals of ivory net fashion a full skirt on this youthful evening gown.

all costumes from Henri Bendel with shoes from Delman, New York

III. Lucile Paray combines crepe marocaine in goldenrod yellow and white in this suit which is worn with a tan felt hat by Bendel and beige kid shoes.

COSTUMES for spring, with that "new feeling," elaborate their borders, accept the long-lined effect, and insist on all accessories reflecting their elegance. Everything a woman wears this spring will have softness and charming details that carry a note of youth.

There is increased feeling for wrapped treatments, with curved pleats, bandings and tucks suggesting these.

For first spring days, plain colors will be best. But just as surely as flowers will bloom when spring finally comes, so surely will fine little prints appear in later spring frocks.

PRINTS, however, are finer, rather more sweet in their design, and daintier. The bold, bizarre print is last year's frock now. Fine worsteds lead in the first costumes for spring, and many is the coat, frock and jacket that uses the cape theme for its chief style feature.

Soft dressmaker coats, suits and frocks are the best possible choice to make if you are buying your spring clothes early. There is to be a great difference in length of coats, and the jacket frock often takes its jacket half way between the accepted seven-eighths ensemble length and the hip-length tailor's jacket.

A WOMAN'S own good taste and her figure are the best guides to coat lengths. Since practically any length is good, the cut of the frock or skirt under the coat, the height of the woman wearing it, the occasion, and the material and kind of suit are the only considerations.

Ensembles favor odd lengths, remember that. From boleros to entire length, they run the gamut. The separate coat or jacket is usually more elaborately cut than one that is merely part of a costume. Draperies are better than ever. Cape sleeves are perhaps the second choice.

It is, withal, a spring of irregularity and elegance. Since elegance satisfies the aesthetic sense and the irregularity is tremendously stimulating to the imagination, spring promises to be a most exciting season in styles.

I. FOR a simple little daytime frock Henri Bendel uses a dainty pale blue, crepe printed in a leaf design in white, yellow and black. The skirt has two godets to give it a fitted body line with fullness well below the hips, and a novel ruffled effect, edged in net, gives the cape sleeves effect.

A belt of the printed material, lined with white ribbon, girdles the figure at the waistline. Since this is a costume for a slender miss, the belt ties in knots, with ends on each side. The length is indicative of the added two to three inches that all simple daytime things have this year.

With this pair of printed crepe shoes in the same color are applied in blue and white kid. The hat is a pink neora straw, with a blue and white grosgrain banding.

II. WHITE is having an unusual vogue this season for evening. For a young girl, a white taffeta and pale ivory net are used in charming combination. The bodice is very simple and the taffeta-bound petals fashion an exaggeratedly full skirt that sweeps the floor all around, giving a demure air to its wearer that heightens the almost irresistible appeal of youth.

There is an elaborate flower arrangement at one side, placed very casually, yet exquisitely done. The slippers chosen for this frock have a bit of magic in their white brocade with silver and gold applique. The very delicate gold and silver ankle strap and diminutive crystal buckles secure them snugly to dancing feet.

III. FOR travel, for smart shopping, luncheon or chic office wear, Bendel shows an import from Lucile Paray that illustrates the style in the new silk suits for spring.

This is a crepe marocaine, in goldenrod yellow and white. A bolero effect is achieved by a manipulation of folds on the bodice of the dress. The waistline follows the gentle curve of these folds. Fullness is introduced in the skirt by a panel of pleats both front and back. The coat is three-quarter length and has the same bias folds trimming it, giving its back section the bolero effect the frock shows.

This is topped by a smart tan felt hat. A good choice in shoes is a walking strap-oxford in beige kidskin trimmed in dark brown calf.

IV. FOR a very youthful effect, there is a gray chiffon tweed coat with a high waistline and cape back that ends in the sleeves.

Fine hand tucks belt this coat, which has the new hemline that comes up slightly in the front. The collar is soft and casual and very graceful and becoming. At its closing there is a little posy made of the chiffon tweed. A Deschat natural haku hat tops it, and the shoes chosen are a pair of pale gray buckskin and black calfskin pumps, with leather heel.

The spring clothes are giving every woman an opportunity to choose styles, colors, and materials that are best adapted to her individual type of beauty. Women have ceased to masquerade as imitations of a peculiar type of fashion goddess, and are making their spring debut as interesting individuals.

IV. a high waistline is fitted to the form with tucks in this coat of gray chiffon tweed. The hat is a Deschat creation of natural haku, and the pumps are of gray buckskin and black calf.

AUTOMOTIVE INDUSTRY PRESENTS ITS 1930 MODELS

General view of the National Automobile Show at the Grand Central Palace, New York, showing Chevrolet in the place of honor for the third consecutive year.

POLICE RADIO SYSTEM.

Powerful radio-equipped automobiles, like that at top, to-day roam Detroit and may soon be seen on Michigan highways in a state-wide effort to reduce crime. The radio equipment is shown at left below. Back of the Detroit system is Police Commissioner William P. Rutledge, at lower right, while back of the Michigan system is Governor Fred W. Green, upper right.

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 5th.—Police and radio authorities of every state are eagerly awaiting trial of the first state-wide radio system of crime prevention and detection to be undertaken in the United States.

Michigan is to be the test state. Approval of state administrative board for an appropriation of $100,000 by the state legislature is the final step toward organization of a state-wide radio-police system, the first in the country.

The programme calls for what may be considered an extension of the system that has been so successful in Detroit, where a central low-wave broadcasting station transmits emergency calls to be picked up by the high-powered radio-equipped automobiles that cruise the city day and night. The Detroit system, which has been in operation since 1921, is credited with having brought a 54 per cent. decrease in burglaries in that city and a 46 per cent. increase in convictions.

It was at the suggestion of William P. Rutledge, Detroit police commissioner, that Governor Fred W. Green considered the advisability of instituting such a system over the state. As a result, last April, a bill was introduced in the state legislature calling for a comprehensive state-wide radio-police system. The present law and $100,000 appropriation is the result.

Every Sheriff to Have Set.

The provisions of this law call for:—

1.—A central radio broadcasting station to be erected at East Lansing from which emergency police calls will be transmitted on a low wavelength.

2.—Distribution of low-wave radio receivers to every sheriff of the state, without cost, and sale of these sets to city police for the purpose of catching the emergency calls from the central station.

3.—Priority of all telephone and telegraph messages to the central broadcasting station, in order to speed up reports of crimes.

4.—A fleet of high-powered armoured automobiles, mounting machine guns and carrying other necessary equipment, besides a radio receiver for each car, for use of the state police.

5.—A police training school designed for the co-operation of state and city police systems into an efficient crime fighting unit.

Detroit System Is Model.

The success of the Detroit system instigated the movement for a state-wide system for Michigan.

With this in operation, a crime detected in any part of the state will almost immediately be known throughout Michigan. All that will be required to make such an act known would be to wire or call direct to the East Lansing station, where the report would be put on the air immediately.

With every radio receiver set permanently for the purpose of listening to this central station only and always in operation, the report would be picked up immediately by every sheriff in the state, every highway police officer in a car that is radio-equipped and such city police that have the same sets.

As a result there would be little chance of a criminal's escape

MORE CYLINDERS.

Twelve and Sixteen.

THE NEW VOGUE.

As last year was the big year for new eight-cylinder automobiles, this year may become the outstanding year for even higher-powered and multi-cylindered cars. This prediction is no vain boast, since it comes from some of the most prominent engineers in the industry.

According to one of these authorities, one who is noted for his conservatism, the New York automobile show, initiating the new year in motordom for 1931, will include at least half a dozen multi-cylindered automobiles—and by these he means cars of 12 or 16 cylinders. That is quite a revelation in light of the fact that we have hardly finished introducing, let alone trying out, the new eights.

Of course, it is hardly to be expected that these large cars will be available at prices the average motorist can pay. At least not for a while. But there is a constantly growing group of motorists that will form a considerable nucleus of prospects for such cars. These will still have their high-priced sights, but will add the 12 or 16 to their stables, just as the average motorist nowadays is being importuned to add a small type car for shopping and general city utility to fill his two-car garage.

Despite all the tendencies toward the larger motors, however, the popularity of the sixes—and the fours, because of a single manufacturer—remains surmountable. The eight, or the 12 or the 16 is the car we hope to own, but the smaller type is the one most of us are buying. Gradually the eight is cutting into the field to the point at which we may consider that too as a prospect for usage. To be exclusive nowadays one must go beyond even the eight—so far as size of motor goes—for that field is assured a certain degree of aloofness for many years to come.

from the scene of his crime, for every means of exit would be watched. At present, it takes from one hour to half a day to notify outlying cities by telegraph and telephone of a criminal's escape, and even then such reports do not cover the territory as fully as would the proposed radio system.

The Detroit system has proven the merit of crime prevention and detection by radio by the swiftness with which violators have been caught. At times the police in a radio cruiser have actually caught men in the act of committing a crime, after having received a report from the central station.

Someone, seeing the men at work would call police headquarters and within three seconds his report would be on the air. A radio squad might be cruising close by the reported crime and so come upon the lawbreakers before they had a chance to escape. The average time for a cruiser to appear on the scene of a crime has been shown to be 80 seconds after the report was made.

Surpasses Former Methods.

That compares favourably with the former system of calling police headquarters, having the report relayed to the nearest precinct station from which a squad would then rush out to the scene of the crime, or from which an officer on his beat would be flashed until he answered the call and got the report. This took many valuable minutes.

Other state police authorities therefore are keenly interested in watching Michigan for the next year or so, in order to see what effect its radio system will have on the prevention of crime and the apprehension of criminals. Its success no doubt will be a strong argument for adoption of similar systems throughout the country.

All motordom has turned to Essex

From cars of every price and size, motorists are selecting Essex the Challenger as their next car. In speed, performance, beautiful colours and economy, this fine Super-Six compares with cars costing far more. With 7 body styles to select from, riding ease and features usually found only in costly cars, Essex the Challenger bids you pit it against anything that motordom has to offer. We will gladly place a car at your command.

NAPOLEON'S COACH FOR SALE

Nobody wants Napoleon's royal coach—at least not Americans. Antiques are all right in their way, even at $4750 each, but a bulky old Briska like the one pictured above would be too much in the way. Note the folding steps—an amazing innovation that day—with which the coach is equipped.

[By Milton Bronner.]

London, Feb. 6th.—In a dusty barn in the East End of London stands a coach of old-fashioned design which recently was offered for sale in the classified columns of a New York newspaper for the modest sum of $4,750.

Sounds like a lot of money for a second-hand vehicle when for that price one can buy a few up-to-date automobiles. But if inanimate objects could talk, the old coach probably would deliver this sad monologue:

"How the mighty have fallen! Once upon a time I was cherished; now I stand in this old barn. Once many servants kept me spotless; now I am neglected and dusty. Once my sides were glossy with bright royal blue paint and there one saw a brilliant red 'N' and an equally brilliant red crown.

"Oh, I was the coach of coaches, all right. Two splendid horses, black as coal, pulled me along. A driver in splendid livery sat in my front seat and gathered up the reins. A postillion sat in the seat behind. Crack went the driver's whip, and we drove out of the stable and up to a fine palace. Other lackies opened the door, pulled down my folding steps and bowed respectfully as a fat little man with raven black hair and pallid skin and piercing eyes stepped in to sit comfortably on my grey brocade seat.

Napoleon Was Owner.

"He was not dressed as gorgeously as his lackies. He usually wore an old green coat with a white vest and a black cocked hat. Oh yes, the year was 1814 and the man, as you have guessed, was the great Napoleon. When the Emperor took the air, while resting in Paris from his campaigns, it was I that took him riding.

"But he hadn't many more days of such pleasures. Came defeats and exile to Elba. Came his escape and his triumphal march across France, his marvellous entry into Paris, and his campaign which ended in Waterloo, his surrender to the English, and then his life-long captivity on the island of St. Helena. He fell, so have I."

But the old coach only told part of its romantic story. The Musée de Voitures de France advises that for a long time after Napoleon's exile, the old coach remained unnoticed and unused by the Bourbon kings who had been restored to the throne. Afterward, when Napoleon III, nephew of the great Napoleon, mounted the throne by a coup d'état, the old Briska was once more brought out. Its big "N" and its crown would do as well for Napoleon the Little as it did for Napoleon the Great.

The First "Sedan."

So once more the coach played its part in history, for after the disastrous battle of Sedan in the Franco-Prussian War of 1870, the tragic emperor travelled in this coach to surrender to the victorious Prussian troops. Hence it got its name of "Sedan Carriage."

In the latter part of 1871, an enterprising tradesman of Paris conceived the idea of forming a collection of relics of the Franco-Prussian War, the French Revolution and the days of Napoleon the First and of making an exhibition of them.

He opened the exhibition in London in the autumn of 1872. But the show did not prosper and the exhibits were sold by auction. Madame Tussaud had opened her world-famous exhibition of wax works in Baker street and, in addition to the wax figures of world celebrities, also wanted a collection of genuine relics connected with great historical events. So she brought the old coach. It was put on show in the great central hall of the building she occupied.

Rescued From Fire.

In 1925 a great fire completely gutted the Tussaud museum and the old coach was one of the few things rescued.

Tussaud's sold it to the motor engineering firm of G. Seammell and Nephew in Fashion Street, London. They, in turn, figured that America would be the best market. Some museum or motor car manufacturer might like to have a collection of vehicles of various periods. Hence the ad:

"Napoleon's coach—World famed historical coach; remarkably fine preservation, embossed royal crest, complete hood, postillions seat, shaft; $4750."

But thus far there have been no offers.

MY BID TO BEAT 231 M.P.H.

Tremendous Risks Involved.

[By Kaye Don in "The Daily Mail."]

I am setting out on the greatest and most thrilling adventure of my life. This task of beating the world's land speed record of 231 miles an hour is the biggest I have ever undertaken or ever shall undertake. One cannot help realising the many real dangers involved in this attempt, but the realisation of our object will justify the risks entailed.

At Wolverhampton now the finishing touches are being put to the Silver Bullet, the all-British 4,000-h.p. Sunbeam special in which I hope to create a new world's record for Britain. Mr. Louis Coatalen has designed for me a car which is an amazing example for British engineering skill. It can justly be described as a mechanised bullet.

Cost £25,000.

So far, the greatest speed I have ever attained on land is 152 miles an hour down the straight at Brooklands.

The Silver Bullet has been built at a cost of nearly £25,000, to travel at between 250 and 300 miles an hour. Anyone who has raced a motor car will be able to imagine the terrific wind velocity encountered at such a high speed.

If I were to expose my head, at all while travelling at 250 miles an hour on Daytona Beach I should certainly be knocked unconscious and might conceivably lose my head altogether! To protect the driver, an exceptionally strong wind-screen composed of safety glass in a steel frame, is being fitted to the Silver Bullet, but even so, there is still a danger, in the event of any small object, such as a bird hitting the wind-screen, of its being shattered.

I remember on one occasion at Brooklands, while making a record attempt, my car struck a cat when travelling at about 120 miles an hour. Afterwards I found that a one-and-a-half-inch thick steel steering-track rod had been bent like a piece of wire. If a bird or any small object were to strike the windscreen while it was moving at 250 miles an hour the result would be very unpleasant.

But that is a gloomy outlook. Every possible precaution has been taken to ensure an adequate margin of safety in the design of this new British car which, it is hoped, will create a new speed record for Britain.

Special wind tunnel tests have been carried out with models to ensure that the best use of streamlining has been made. These tests have shown that the car should keep firmly on the ground despite the tremendous air pressure.

I think the danger from fire and the bursting of oil or petrol pipes has been eliminated. Despite every care, however, there is always a danger of something breaking or seizing. The fracture of a spring even would be extremely serious. Again, if the brakes or engine were to "seize," the car would, in all probability, get out of control.

Tremendous Strain.

The tyres will have to undergo a tremendous strain. At 300 miles an hour, the wheels will be doing something like 3,000 revolutions every minute. The centrifugal force thus set up would increase the normal diameter of the tyres by one inch.

At the same speed, the tyres would consume no less than 1,792,000 foot pounds of energy every minute. That is enough to lift an ordinary express passenger train right off the ground. The two engines of the Silver Bullet are rated at 4,000-h.p. and, of this total, the tyres alone will consume 200-h.p., or twenty times that of some light motor-car engines.

One of the 2,000-h.p. engines alone, when firing, shakes the factory with its roar. When both engines are "revved" up it will be necessary to wear ear plugs to deaden the sound.

Added to this will be the noise of the other working parts of the car, which will all be moving at terrific speeds. The blower, fan alone, which takes the place of superchargers, will be turning at 30,000 revolutions a minute, or 500 revolutions a second, so you will realise that, to say the least of it, mine should be not only a very exciting but also a very noisy adventure.

HON. MR. HYNES' RETIREMENT.

SEVERE 36 YEARS' SERVICE WITH HONGKONG BANK.

HAD ACTIVE CAREER.

Banking circles not only in Hongkong but throughout the Far East have to-day suffered a big loss by the departure for Home, on retirement, of the Hon. Mr. A. C. Hynes, until recently Chief Manager of the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation. Mr. Hynes has been in the service of the Bank for some 36 years, over twelve of which have been in the Head Office in Hongkong, and for the past three years he has been in charge. His ability in the face of unusual difficulties during the period of his Chief Managership has won him many tributes. Genial and unassuming in manner, he has always been most accessible to all who have had occasion to consult him in business, whilst, with Mrs. Hynes, he has won much popularity in social circles.

Mr. and Mrs. Hynes left by the P. and O. liner Kalyan to-day, taking with them the best wishes of a host of friends for their happiness and good health in the Old Country. They intend to settle down in North Devon, where they have had a country residence built.

First Eastern Post.

Mr. Hynes was educated at Bedford School, and he joined the London branch of the Hongkong and Shanghai Bank in 1893. After three and a half years' service, he first came East, being appointed in 1897 to Penang, where he remained as junior assistant for three years. From there, he was transferred to the Singapore office of the Bank, remaining for seven months, and then for two years he served in Bangkok, at the conclusion of which he went on Home leave. Returning in March, 1904, Mr. Hynes made his first acquaintance with Hongkong, remaining here until March, 1909, when he was transferred to Amoy to take charge. After two months, he again went on leave, and in 1910 he was appointed as manager of the Ipoh Agency, this being the first of the Bank's agencies in the F.M.S. Here he stayed until 1912, when, in July, he was appointed to the Head Office in Hongkong as Chief Accountant. This position he held until February, 1915, and he became Acting Sub-Manager until October of that year, when he again proceeded on leave.

Further Promotion.

In January, 1917, Mr. Hynes came out to Shanghai, doing the voyage via the Cape, owing to submarine dangers. He held the post of Sub-Manager in Shanghai until February, 1922, when he once again went on leave. In February of the following year, he was appointed Manager in Singapore, and there he remained until May, 1925, in which month he returned to Hongkong as Manager, a position which he filled until 1926.

After short leave at Home, he was appointed Chief Manager in Hongkong, in succession to Mr. A. H. Barlow, a position which he held from March 9th, 1927, until his recent resignation.

Public Service.

In addition to his banking activities, Mr. Hynes has rendered service to the community in various ways. He was appointed a member of the Legislative Council in 1927, a position which he has ever since held, and he was also for some months a member of the Executive Council. He has served on the Committees of the Hongkong General Chamber of Commerce, the Hongkong branch of the China Association, the Finance Committee and Court of the Hongkong University, the Matilda and War Memorial Hospitals, and the Missions to Seamen. He has also been a Steward of the Hongkong Jockey Club and Vice-Commander of the Royal Hongkong Yacht Club, in addition to which he has been trustee of endowments for St. John's Cathedral and for many of the churches of the Colony.

In his younger days, Mr. Hynes was a keen rider and was frequently seen in the saddle at the Race Meetings, besides which he was an ardent yachtsman.

Mrs. Hynes' Activities.

In 1910, Mr. Hynes was married in Penang to Miss Doris Gilman, a daughter of the late Mr. F. Gilman, who was for many years connected with the well-known Hongkong firm of Gilman and Company. Mrs. Hynes, during her residence in the Colony, has interested herself in local philanthropic work, being a prominent member of the Hongkong Women's Guild and the Ministering Children's League, which are now amalgamated. For several years she has been in charge of the Peak branch of this organization. She has also been a keen Church worker in connexion with St. John's Cathedral.

TELEPHONE CO.'S ENTERPRISE.

outside the City limits. The completion of this work has only been rendered possible by the adoption of an intensive reconstruction programme and by the expenditure of large sums on new underground ducts and cables—1076.53 circuit miles of underground cable and 49,431 circuit miles of covered distribution having been laid down during the year under review. In addition, a new submarine cable providing a further 100 channels of communication between Hongkong and Kowloon was successfully laid in the early part of the year, and 464 additional exchange lines were connected up which, I think you will agree, is extremely satisfactory.

The improved service to subscribers, resulting from the development just outlined, is very apparent from the records kept by your Company, although the full benefits will not be derived until after the change to automatic working, when it will be possible to disassociate entirely the old plant from the new. At present these two plants must be interconnected in order to provide uninterrupted service under both the old and new systems.

The Automatic System.

This brings me to the subject of the date of change-over to automatic working. You will no doubt recollect that when I addressed you at the last annual meeting, I expressed the opinion that, subject to shipments coming forward as promised by the contractor, the change-over would be effected before the date of the present meeting. Unfortunately, very considerable delays occurred in connexion with the shipment of various portions of the automatic equipment, but the whole of the apparatus is now to hand and has been installed in the Exchange premises, and we are promised by the contractor that the same will be tested out ready for operation not later than the last week in April.

The work of connecting all the existing subscribers' lines to the new automatic exchanges and the conversion of the magneto apparatus in subscribers' premises has now been completed and has satisfactorily passed the customary tests. This work has been of very considerable magnitude, but notwithstanding its intricacy, has been carried out with a comparatively small amount of interference with the normal operation of the service.

A large amount of work will remain to be performed after the change of system, namely the cutting away of the underground cable connections to the old Exchanges and the elimination of the magneto operating feature from the telephone instruments, but this work will be so carried out as to cause the minimum of inconvenience to subscribers.

Co-operation Asked.

I would ask all subscribers to co-operate closely with the Company—particularly during the few days before and after the change-over—in order that the inauguration of the new system may be smoothly accomplished and the full benefits of automatic operation made immediately available to the telephone public. Subscribers can best do this by paying careful attention to the instructions issued by the Company for their guidance and by taking the opportunity of visiting the interesting demonstration models which the Company has specially constructed to provide full operating instruction to telephone users.

Trunk Phone to Canton.

Shareholders will be interested to learn that very definite progress has been made in the negotiations for the establishment of a trunk telephone service between Hongkong and Canton, and, subject to Government approval of the project, it is possible that the trunk service will be inaugurated in approximately one year from date.

If the work is carried out in the manner contemplated by your Company, it should result in 24 lines, operating on a no-delay basis, being available for telephone calls between the two cities. These lines will be carried, in a special underground cable, and consequently there should be no interruption to the service even during the worst weather conditions.

A service operating on these lines should prove an inestimable boon to merchants in Hongkong and Canton, who would then be able to get into direct and immediate communication with each other for the transaction of business. In the trunk cable referred to, it is the intention of your Company to make provision for the installation of lines to Swatow at a later date, as your Company feels that with the rapid strides now being made in the field of long-distance telephony, it will only be a question of time before telephone service between Hongkong and all important cities in China, and eventually beyond, will become an accomplished fact.

THE RETURN OF EUNICE.

leapt to her feet and Kuttie pulled her under the nearest doorway. "What is it dear? What is happening?" she cried in a voice in which annoyance was mixed with fear.

"Earthquake," he answered laconically. "We'll stay here. There may be another shock." "On the floor in front of them lay a vase of flowers. The water from it trickled across the verandah. A blue and white ginger jar had fallen from the windowsill and was smashed in pieces. Through the window Eunice saw a great cloud of dust rising from the native city.

"They heard the boy's voice calling 'Master, Master,' and a moment later he came running in, his face grey with fright. 'I so pleased you all light, master, mississee,' he said.

"More better you stop this side. Maybe come again," said Kuttie, pulling him under the door way. At that moment they felt the floor begin to rock beneath them. The pictures on the wall began to swing and as the movement increased, another ginger jar fell and broke with a crash. A great boulder that had been loosened by the first shock broke loose and went bounding down the hillside, smashing through the shrubs in the garden and carrying away twenty yards of the compound wall. New clouds of dust arose on all sides and the town was completely lost to sight. A noise like heavy guns being fired in the distance, mingled with the sound of human voices filled the air.

Eunice was terribly frightened and clung to her husband with both arms.

A third shock, but a very much slighter one, followed a few minutes afterwards, and ten minutes after that, Kuttie thought it would be safe to leave the shelter of the doorway. The town was still enveloped in dust, and on the edge of the cloud one could see the figures of men and women running excitedly about. Here and there the dust took on the appearance of smoke, and in two places red and yellow flames were leaping high into the air.

Then without warning a fierce gust of wind came and immediately afterwards, heavy rain which lasted for half an hour.

Very little damage had been done to the O.P.C. mess, and no-one was hurt. The servants remained one by one and began to tidy up the place. The same boulder that had carried away part of the garden wall had crashed through an outhouse where a policeman friend of the gardener's was enjoying a pipe of opium, missing him by a foot. The policeman was so frightened that he had left everything and bolted. His pipe lay on the bench and the lamp was still burning.

As Eunice and her husband were walking round the house and garden to see what damage had been done, they heard a soft voice behind them say "Tea ready, master."

"That's what I call Service," remarked Kuttie who was beginning to resume his normal chirpy self. "I wonder what's happened to Bonzo and the others. He'll be back here soon, if he's still alive. It looks as if there will be a lot of clearing up to do after this. Thank God the rain came and put the fires out. Still the insurance companies will have to cough up a few lakhs. I'll be bound. By the way, my dear, how are you feeling now? As soon as Bonzo comes we'd better try and get up to our house. It may be knocked about a bit.

CORRESPONDENCE.

The Church's Big Problem.

[To The Editor of Hongkong Telegraph.]

Sir,—I read with much interest your leader on the above topic. You put the view of the plain man who asks why, if, as seems to be the case, most ministers of the Church have accepted the results of the historical criticism of the Bible, and of scientific work on the subject of evolution, the Church does not make a clear pronouncement on the subject, and dissipate misunderstanding.

So far as I have seen, no-one has taken up your challenge and possibly for the very reason which has hitherto prevented the Church from making the pronouncement which you desiderate. For who, sir, can speak in the name of the Church? Is it certain that the Founder of Christianity contemplated a church so organised that it could make final pronouncements on these points. The Roman Church has held that 'He did. The Protestant churches believe that it is at least a moot point. For how can the Church make a general pronouncement?

There are only two ways. Either she must assemble a General Council, as she did in the early days of the faith, and issue the results of her discussions; or she must rely on the general, but neither binding nor inclusive, witness of her members.

The first way is not possible today, nor I venture to think desirable. Even if the Church were so closely united that she could speak with one voice, it seems most improbable that the present is an age in which final pronouncements, which would have the form of creed or confession, can be made. For the same reason men hesitate to scrap the creeds and confessions which they have. In the present age, largely through the influence of science, thought is fluid, and final standards cannot be formulated. But those which have been handed down register, though in terms which are strange to modern ears, the convictions of the past, and the convictions gained then are something we do not want to discard, though the form of expression is old. The time has not come to reformulate these, but the way in which we interpret them can be stated. This has been done in the national Church of Scotland, and in some of the Free Churches of England. It is implicit in the attitude of the Established Church of England to its standards.

There is, however, another way in which the Church may be said to speak. That is through the mouth of its leaders. In this way she has spoken with no little force and decision. The long list of names in Scotland from Robertson Smith down through Davidson, George Adam Smith, Moffat and so on, and the equally long list of men in the English church like Lightfoot, Westcott and Hort, Driver, Ryle, Cheyne, Sanday and a host of others to Canon Streeter and Bishop Barnes, and further the long list of names of English Nonconformists such as Bennett, Adeney, Moulton, Skinner and Peake, and again a host of others, have all spoken to the acceptance as true of the historical interpretation of the Bible and the acceptance in most cases of the evolutionary point of view. The amazing thing is that it has to be left to Bishop Barnes at this late hour to come out as the champion of views determined fifty years ago, and for the Daily Mail to hail them as new.

The reason that more is not heard in the pulpit of these things is that partly they seem to be irrelevant to the preaching of the truth of the gospel, partly that they require courses of study rather than the limited time given to the sermon in the modern service, and partly to the fear of giving offence to those whose views are old-fashioned. This last has operated very strongly, not so much through fear of the consequences to the preacher, as through the feeling that it is not fair to burden those who have already found a simple faith in God with the effort to readjust their views, sometimes, as they erroneously feel, at the expense of their faith. Care for them has been at the expense of the young, who now tend to stay away from the church under the impression that it is closed to new ideas, and unwilling to face the facts. This is a profound misfortune.

Some way must be found to bridge the gap between the pulpit and the pew. But it must be emphasised that if this is to be done it must be with the co-operation of the pew. The critical reading of the Bible cannot be done in a few spare moments. People must be willing to attend classes or courses of lectures, or to read short but clear introductions to the literature of the Bible. The result will be to reinstate the Bible in the place of pre-eminence which it once had, and at the same time relieve faith from the burden of believing what is manifestly not true, and probably was never intended to be taken as true in the literal historical sense. Hongkong.TENNIS TOURNEY.*EXCELLENT GAMES SEEN YESTERDAY.

One of the best displays of tennis yet seen in the current tournament was witnessed yesterday in the second set of the singles match between S. A. Rumjahn and Cheng Chi-wing, and the large gathering of onlookers followed the exchanges with unabated interest and admiration.

It was the one period in the match when both players were seen at their best. Long rallies were finished off on either side by splendidly placed "winners," and in this respect, Cheng was equally as successful as Rumjahn. His passing shots were particularly well executed and Rumjahn was obviously worried into two minds on more than one occasion. The Indian, however, proved the value of match-play experience, and eventually wore down his opponent to take a lead of two sets, and he quickly polished off the match after that by winning the third at 6-2.

Cheng played a very creditable fighting game, but Rumjahn showed that he was still able to extricate himself from awkward positions and to turn unpromising positions into winning points.

M. W. Lo suffered his first shock of the tournament, when he had to concede the first set to Ng Sze-cheung, but he recovered and at the close was leading by the odd set and 3-2 in the fourth. The standard of play compared very poorly with that of the Rumjahn-Cheng encounter, both contestants remaining rigidly to the base-line, and the exchanges were decidedly unenterprising.

The match had to be abandoned with Lo leading by 2 sets to 1, the light not being sufficiently good to allow the players to continue.

The following are the full scores of yesterday's matches:

Open Singles (third round).—S. A. Rumjahn beat Cheng Chi-wing 6-4, 8-6, 6-2; in the match between Lo and Ng Sze-cheung, the former was leading 2-6, 7-5, 6-1, 3-2, when it was abandoned.

Club Championship (second round).—S. E. Green beat J. A. Summers 6-4, 6-2.

Handicap Singles "B" (second round).—N. L. H. Raiton (-3/6) beat J. E. Henry (scr.) 6-8, 6-4, 6-2.

Handicap Doubles (second round).—G. E. R. Divett and E. J. R. Mitchell (rec. 2/6) beat I. S. Harris and A. W. Hay Eadie (rec. 3/8) 3-6, 6-3, 6-0; E. R. Price and T. J. Price (scr.) beat J. Barrow and D. M. McDougall (-3/6) 7-5, 6-8, 6-4.

Tennis at Night.

Though the idea is not entirely new to the Colony, the staff of the China Light and Power Company have introduced the playing of tennis at night in Kowloon. One of the courts has been illuminated by eight arc lamps, and last night on the occasion of an informal opening, a large number of members of the staff indulged in an enjoyable game of tennis. During the evening the Hon. Mr. J. P. Braga visited the grounds and watched the play for a short time.

V.R.C. MEETING.*IMPROVED FINANCIAL POSITION SHOWN.

At the annual general meeting of members of the Victoria Recreation Club, held yesterday evening under the chairmanship of Mr. W. Logan, it was revealed that the Club is now in a flourishing condition, and that although the year was commenced with a loss it finished with a profit and no outstanding liabilities.

Mr. Logan recalled that years ago, before the Club was moved to Hongkong, the membership was 450. With the renovated building and a good financial position, he added he would like to see the Club go ahead and equal its former membership.

He concluded by referring to a letter received from the Chairman, the Hon. Mr. W. T. Southern, C.M.G., in which he expressed regret at not being able to attend the meeting and informed the members he was pleased to see that the Club was in such a flourishing condition. (Applause).

The Hon. Mr. W. T. Southern, was unanimously re-elected Chairman.

Mr. James Stewart and Mr. H. Hyndman were re-elected to the positions of hon. secretary and hon. treasurer, respectively. Prior to the elections, the chairman remarked that Mr. Stewart had done yeoman service during the year, and they were fortunate in being able to retain the services of Mr. Hyndman (Applause).

The general committee, composed of the following members, were re-elected en bloc.—Messrs. W. Logan, F. W. T. Ross, A. F. B. Silva-Netto, J. R. Soares, A. A. Alves, J. R. Johnston, S. A. Marcal, W. Anderson and J. J. Edgar.

The following were elected to the balloting committee.—Messrs. J. M. M. Alves, E. P. Lourenco, J. A. Victor, W. F. Kerr, L. Roza Pereira, W. G. Howard, B. Gosano, L. A. Soares, R. W. H. Maynard and W. Fornita.

Mr. W. S. Bailey, who donated $25 towards club repair expenses, Mr. J. H. R. Hance and Mr. W. G. Goggin, who donated debentures to the Club, were unanimously elected Life Members.

Mr. D. Lyon expressed thanks to the Club for the honour they had done his father in electing him a Life Member. Mr. Lyon said his father had hoped to return to Hongkong, but could not do so. He wished to thank them very much.

SCHOOL CRICKET.D. B. S. DEFEATS QUEEN'S COLLEGE.

Queen's College met Diocesan Boys' School in a cricket match on Wednesday after a very enjoyable game. They were just defeated by two wickets.

Of the total of 112 compiled by Queen's College, Douglas Hunt contributed 26 (not out) and A. Hunt and Abbas 17 each. Wood captured four wickets at the cost of 23 runs and Prata two for seven.

CINEMA NOTES."DYNAMITE" AUTHOR AS SCENARIST

"I've heard many actors and stunt men describe the greatest thrill they ever had," said Jeanie MacPherson, the author of "Dynamite," Cecil B. De Mille's first talking picture, due at the Queen's Theatre to-morrow.

"None of them, however, can compare with my feelings when I heard just three words, 'This will do.'"

"The three words applied to 'The Rose of the Rancho,' the first of the thirty-eight photoplays I have written for Cecil B. De Mille. And they meant more than any other incident, before or since, because the script which Mr. De Mille accepted was the sixth I had turned in on this one story!"

"For amateur writers, of course, the lesson of this tale is that persistence and patience are the greatest attributes of success in writing for the screen. Mr. De Mille had told me, 'you write like a plumber.' That made me so mad I was determined to show him, I succeeded. But if he hadn't accepted that sixth scenario I might not be in the picture business to-day."

"Mr. De Mille has since told me that had I failed to stick, he never would have retained me. At the time, however, I didn't realise the value of hanging on. My main sensation was the glorious one of being raised at one bound from the depths of despondency to the heights of happiness."

Lois Moran's First Revue.

A musical revue with a college setting which projects audibly the verve and sparkle of campus life, is the vehicle for Lois Moran's debut in a Fox Movietone singing, dancing and talking screen role. The picture is "Words and Music."

Talented youngsters from campuses and dancing schools, together with noted entertainers from the legitimate stage, form the supporting cast. Eight song numbers are included, also. They range from snappy dance tunes to haunting love ballads. William Kernell, Harlan Thompson, Dave Stamper and Con Conrad, Sidney D. Mitchell and Archie Grotter wrote the songs. All are famous "Tin Pan Alley" boys.

F. K. Lee was the highest scorer for the D.B.S. with 66 and Trafford was next with 35. Only one other player reached double figures. Tsui Yun-pui captured four wickets at 10 runs apiece for Queen's College, Saffad three for 35, and Abbas two for seven.

MR. PEPYS IN HONGKONG.

VII.

This day to office and then betimes to my wine-merchants, Caldebecks, where Mr. Oliver mighty civil. And I do speak with him about a certain strong water that Jonas Shish, a master shipwright late out of Plymouth Town, do tell me he drank there to his mighty content. And I do find its name be called gynne, whereof I do order me a hoggeshead, as I find it right comforting to the stomach these cold nights. And I do prickle Mr. Oliver that he do send a tierce of claret for the poor thirsty actors who do rehearse my play. But much I fear they quench not their thirst in this way. And while there I do meet Mr. Marriott, who do act Caesar in my play, and as Mr. Povy do tell me do act the part marvellous well, and in the drinking scene as lifelike as ever any one saw, so I do congratulate him heartily, and he mightily pleased and do bring out some curious sherrys sack they do keep. And very merry we were. And so to nuncheon at the Club where all in a fine pothier over the dues which men say must grow more. But while our gettings be less and our outgoings be more, Lord! but how shall a man fare? So melancholy back to the office, and later home where I did even my accounts. But I doubt I am a worse man than last year, which is a sorry case. And so to bed.

Captain A. Laithwaite, D.S.O., R.A.S.C., who has been stationed in Hongkong for some time, has been posted to Shanghai, and sailed for that port yesterday. Mobilised in the ranks of the Territorial Force from the outbreak of war to 25.4.17, Captain Laithwaite was commissioned with the Middlesex Regiment to 11.12.20, transferring to the R.A.S.C., and taking seniority as Lieutenant from 25.9.19. His captaincy is dated 21.12.28. Captain Laithwaite served as G.S.O.3 in Persia from 27.11.19 to 19.11.20 as a temporary Captain, whilst he was in France from 6.8.17 to 6.11.18, being wounded once and once mentioned in despatches. Captain A. L. Shaw, The Green Howards, who has recently been gazetted to his present rank, has been posted from the 1st Battalion stationed at Aldershot, to the 2nd Battalion, new serving in Shanghai.

CHURCH AND STATE IN MALTA.

VATICAN CLAIM REFUSED BY GOVERNMENT.

Malta, Feb. 3.

The veil of secrecy with regard to reports that police proceedings under the Post Office law against Father Carta had been stayed owing to the intervention of the Vatican has been lifted by the tabling in the Legislative Assembly this afternoon of a lengthy correspondence which passed between Sir T. Bartolo, then acting Premier, and the locum tenens of the Archbishop.

The fact is disclosed that there really was an attempt by the ecclesiastical authorities to interfere in the normal course of justice, which claim was however, resisted by the Government. The locum tenens opened the question by informing the Government of an order received from the Archbishop, then in Rome, withdrawing the permission to proceed against Father Carta.

Sir T. Bartolo replied that the intention of the Government to proceed against Father Carta had been communicated to the Archbishop as a matter of dutiful deference and not in order to obtain his Grace's permission for the institution of proceedings. He regretted that the Government was unable to admit the claim, put forward for the first time, that the permission of the ecclesiastical authorities was necessary for the prosecution of ecclesiastics for offences affecting public order, as this would once again confer on the latter immunity, a privilege abolished by law more than a century ago. The claim would involve a surrender of the fundamental principles governing his Majesty's subjects in every part of his Majesty's dominions.

[Proceedings were taken against Father Carta for posting letters direct on board an Italian ship.]

WOMAN BEFORE PRIVY COUNCIL.

FIRST TO PLEAD IN PERSON.

Mrs. Elizabeth Bethune Campbell, of Toronto, the first woman appellant to plead in person before the highest judicial court in the Empire, appeared before the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council on Feb. 2.

Her appeal, brought as the daughter of the late Lady (Elizabeth M.) Howland, formerly Mrs. Bethune, widow of the late Mr. James Bethune, Q.C., of Toronto, was from a judgment of the first Appellate Division of the Supreme Court of Ontario; the respondents were Mr. W. D. Hogg, and the Toronto General Trusts Corporation. The question to be determined was stated to be one of trusteeship in reference to the estate of Mrs. Campbell's mother.

Mrs. Campbell, who has had no training as a lawyer, has been in London since August reading both at the British Museum and in the library at the Privy Council in preparation for her appeal.

The Judges were Lords Blanesburgh, Warrington, and Russell of Killowen.

The only legal representatives in Court were those for the respondents: Mr. Ronald Smith for Mr. Hogg, and Mr. Frank Gahan for the Toronto General Trusts Corporation.

Mrs. Campbell, standing alone, proceeded to state the grounds of her appeal, and quoted readily from statutes as to the Court's jurisdiction.

Lord Blanesburgh, looking up, observed, "Yes, you have read it quite correctly. Now we have our jurisdiction."

The hearing was adjourned.

The Innocent Cheat

By Ruth Dwyer Croves

THIS HAS HAPPENED.

Helen Paine feels indebted to and in love with her guardian, Leonard Brent, who changes his plans for her future after meeting a young man named Nellin. At 18, he presents the girl to a millionaire, Cyril Cunningham, as his heiress and offers proof which the lonely old man accepts without question, as he has been searching for his dead daughter's child for years.

Among Helen's new friends are Eva Ennis and her brother Robert. Brent finds another locket like the one he had taken from Nellin to prove Helen the heiress and plots to get Cunningham out of the way quickly. He subtly administers a shock which proves fatal and the servants find the old man dead in bed. Then he wins Helen's promise to marry him. Later, she and Bob realize they love each other, but she tells him she is engaged. She tries to get Brent to release her, but he refuses and makes dire threats if she dares to marry Bob.

A romantic Helen's treatment of her brother, which has driven him to fighting with Shalimar Morris. She scolds Bob and tells her Helen is engaged to Brent without disclosing after admitting that Brent has been making love to her. Bob goes to expose Brent to Helen, and while they are talking an urgent call comes from his mother. They rush out just in time to prevent Eva from taking possession in a fit of hysteria. Helen tries to tell her brother that she is not engaged, but she insists that she must see him. Helen decided to see him first and phones for him to come up.

CHAPTER XLII.

Brent dressed leisurely and lingered over his breakfast, taking a third cup of the crystal-clear coffee his man had prepared for him—adding a tiny pinch of salt in place of sugar or cream. His steaming fragrance, mingled with the smoke from his Turkish cigarette, filled him with a sense of well-being that brought the look of a lately fed jungle beast into his eyes. His satanic smile played over his lips now and then as certain pleasing thoughts came to him.

Helen must be stewing over his delay. Let her. The more upset she was the better for him.

Carmel had promised to be good, being clever enough to know the limit of all things.

Eva was a mouse. No trouble there.

That girl Shalimar—well, if she hadn't landed Bob Ennis it didn't matter. She'd soon be sent packing—he'd see to that. Not have her hanging around to give Ennis an excuse to call. The young puppy might have the nerve even with the door closed in his face at Helen's orders.

But what did it matter? What did anything matter? Brent drank deep from the cup, drew in a long breath of smoke and steeped himself in his satisfaction.

Helen was his. He could take her when he wished. She was utterly helpless.

Finally he glanced at a small clock on his desk, arose, stretched himself agreeably, and went to change his dressing gown for his street coat.

His Japanese, ever watchful, came in to help him. Brent told him to telephone for his car.

The garage was just around the corner, a convenience for which those who hired space in it were required to pay heavily. The car was brought to the door of Brent's apartment house within 10 minutes and he went down to take the wheel, thoroughly convinced that the ultimate success of his scheming was at hand.

Fears he had entertained formerly that Helen would refuse the new role he would offer her had subsided. No one could be so mad, he believed.

Give up millions? Face poverty—a girl who had been carefully protected all her life? Yes, perhaps, he admitted, but the publicity? Could she stand up to all that exposure would mean to her? He thought not.

Not caring for slow driving, he made good time to Yonkers.

Helen was waiting for him. She ran to open the door herself, having lost much of her self control while waiting for him in nervous anxiety.

He attempted to take her hand for a kiss in greeting but she drew it angrily away from him and turned to lead the way to the living room.

Brent followed without a word. She must be the first to speak—it suited his purpose to have it so.

In the privacy of the vast room she whirled upon him and her words came like the lash of a whip. "I've heard about you and Eva," she said.

Brent stiffened slightly, the only outward sign that she had disturbed his poise. One eyebrow went up inquiringly, but he remained silent.

"Well, what do you mean to do about it?" Helen pursued.

"Do?" Brent repeated blankly. "Are you thinking of marrying her?" Helen asked tensely.

"My dear girl!" Brent was amused.

"I see," Helen said icily. "I am glad to know that you have no such impossible intention," she went on, her eyes fairly burning with scorn for him.

"You need not have worried," Brent said hastily. "I shall marry no one but you, Helen."

For a moment Helen was too furious to speak. Then: "You are mistaken," she said, using all her will to say it calmly, "if you expect to marry me."

"There is a great deal, and it will take some time," he differed. "It won't be pleasant either—for you. You'd better sit down, my dear."

Helen glanced at her wrist-watch. "I am taking Miss Morris to the station in a few minutes," she told him. "Please say what you have to say as quickly as possible."

"I'd advise you to make other arrangements for getting her there," Brent remarked. "You do not take me seriously, I see, but you will shortly, and I predict that you will not be in a mood to drive out when this interview is over."

Helen refused to be frightened. "Very well," Brent began as she stood waiting. His practice of politeness compelled him to rise and stand also. "You may as well have it straight from the shoulder. Here it is: You will never marry Ennis!"

Helen smiled disdainfully. "You won't have the nerve to tell him that you're a criminal," Brent went on; "and if you marry him without telling him I'll expose you."

Helen's eyes were wide with mixed emotions, chiefly astonishment and disbelief, but there was fear lurking in them as well. Fear that Brent was evil enough to have found some way to wreck her happiness, however innocent of any wrong she herself might be.

She made a wordless sound of protest and shrank back from his closer, threatening approach.

"What have you to say to that?" he demanded.

Helen rallied her courage. "Only that you are a contemptible coward," she cried, "and utterly insane."

"Am I?" Brent mocked her. "Possibly, but not too insane to have put you in the Nellin girl's place—to have won an immense fortune for you—and to have you just where I want you."

Helen was now completely confused, quite unable to follow him. He saw that she would not know where to begin to ask the questions that were seething in her mind and decided to tell her everything of her story from the start.

Helen listened helplessly. It was so appalling, so shocking, to hear the dead parents she had revered revealed as crooks, to learn that Brent himself was even worse than she had thought him—she could do nothing but stare glassily at him while her world fell about her head.

He told her the whole truth—how he had stumbled upon the facts of the Cunningham case—how he had conceived the idea of imposing her upon the aged man as his granddaughter—and what it meant to him.

"And now you know why you can't refuse to marry me," he ended.

Helen's lips opened stiffly—her words came with great difficulty. "But you... you are the criminal," she cried hoarsely.

Brent's tenseness slackened, his tigerishness left him, and he became on the instant his old suave, unperturbed self. He had been ferocious in his attack, brutal, delighting in it. But he knew that his moves must now be cautious, more carefully planned.

"Unfortunately, for you," he said quietly, "you cannot prove your innocence."

As the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders are due to leave Tientsin for their new post in Hongkong about March 23, a farewell dance was to be given in their honour at the Gordon Hall on Monday, March 10. The Argylls, says the North China Daily Mail, have only been stationed in Tientsin for a short period, but during that time they have made a host of friends among local residents, and the regiment's excellent band will

GANDHI'S MARCH.

INFLUENCES HEADMEN
TO RESIGN.

Ahmedabad, Mar. 14.
Gandhi and his followers at six this morning left Nawagaon, and reached Vasma, where they are halting until this afternoon. The party will spend the night at Matar.

Addressing journalists this morning, Gandhi appealed to them to be patriotic and support the country's cause.

Speaking to villagers at Nawagaon last night, Gandhi congratulated eight headmen who had resigned their posts in protest at Vallabhai Patel's imprisonment. He exhorted the villagers to manufacture and wear khaddar (homespun), and volunteer as civil disobedience workers. Gandhi's exhortations resulted in the resignations of the police headmen of the villages of Vasma and Mahabal. The villagers vowed in the presence of Gandhi not to fill the vacancies.—Reuter.

Calcutta's Mayor Leaves.

Calcutta, Mar. 14.
Large crowds gathered to witness the departure, under arrest, of Sen Gupta for Rangoon. A motor-car procession accompanied him to Outram Ghat, where he embarked aboard a ship for Burma. Sen Gupta was profusely garlanded, his forehead being painted with vermilion marks on the occasion of to-day's Hindu Festival. Sen Gupta in a parting message said: "Dissolve the present Bengal executive, and form one whose members believe in Gandhi's leadership and do not let the fair name of Bengal be sullied."—Reuter.

[Sen Gupta, the Mayor of Calcutta, has been arrested on a Rangoon warrant charging him with making seditious speeches.]

Volunteer Salt-Workers.

Poona, Mar. 14.

A "war council" of eleven has been appointed to organise passive resistance in the Poona district. A hundred volunteers have enrolled, and resolved to march to the suburb of Bombay on the sea-coast and manufacture salt.—Reuter.

A NEW EMPRESS.

LARGEST AND FASTEST ON THE PACIFIC.

Additional details regarding the new Empress of Japan, the latest and largest ship of the Canadian Pacific Steamship Company, have been received in Hongkong.

The Empress of Japan was launched at Glasgow on December 17 last. She will be the largest and fastest steamer engaged in regular traffic on the Pacific Ocean, and also one of the most modern and sumptuous liners in the world.

Painted in glistening white, a blue ribbon heading her main deck, she will arouse deep enthusiasm not only in her owners but also in the shipping and travelling public as, proud of line and elegant of design, she steams seawards on her romantic career.

She will, before taking up her position on the Pacific, make one round trip on the Atlantic, leaving Liverpool on June 14 and leaving Quebec for Southampton on June 24. From Southampton she will proceed to Vancouver on July 12, making her first voyage from Hongkong on August 7.

Thereafter she will maintain a regular schedule, calling at Honolulu, Yokohama, Kobe, Shanghai, Hongkong and Manila. On the eastbound service she omits Honolulu and calls at Victoria.

The Empress of Japan is a three-funnelled twin-screw oil-burner of 23,000 tons. Her propelling machinery consists of geared turbine engines, developing an average speed of 21 knots. The principal dimensions are:

Length (overall) 665 feet
Breadth (at Promenade Deck) 87½ "

Depth ("A" deck) 56½ "

By comparison, the Empress of Canada, at present the largest Canadian Pacific ship on the Pacific run has a tonnage of 21,517 tons.

There are six decks, running forward and aft and lettered from "A" to "F." The superstructure consists of Boat and Promenade Decks—each over 300 feet in length—topped by the Navigating Bridge which, 68 feet above the load water-line, is the most up-to-date and complete of its kind.

The Empress of Japan will have a carrying capacity of 400 First, 164 Second, 100 Third Class and 548 Asiatic Steerage passengers. Accommodation for First Class passengers is on Boat, "A" and "B" decks—for Second Class passengers: aft on "B" and "C" decks—and for Third Class passengers: aft on "D" deck. The Second Class cabins on "B" deck can on occasion be rapidly converted into First Class staterooms.

A J.P. CHARGED.

ALLEGATIONS AGAINST STRAITS CHINESE.

The case against Mui Kwok-leung, alias Boey Kwik-leung, charged with trafficking in opium and with having in his possession a large quantity of the drugs, was again before Mr. R. E. Lindsay, the Central Magistrate, yesterday afternoon.

The accused is described as having a high civic and business standing in the Straits Settlements, being a Justice of the Peace and connected with the tin mining industry.

He was recently arrested at an address in Queen's Road Central, and while papers seized in his possession are being gone into by the Revenue Department, the following charges have been preferred against him.

(a) That he did an act preparatory to the exporting of contraband opium from the Colony.

(b) That he was in unlawful possession of 1,189 taels of non-Government prepared opium.

(c) That he was in unlawful possession of 1,358 taels of non-Government raw opium.

The value of the seizure is placed at about $15,000.

At a previous appearance before the Court, Mui was remanded for a week, it being then indicated that the case was of some importance and that the Superintendent of Imports and Exports would be personally conducting the proceedings in Court as soon as the papers seized had been gone through.

No further comment was made as Mr. Lindsay at the expiration of the week's remand, yesterday afternoon, again adjourned the case until Thursday afternoon, at 2.15 p.m.

Accused responded to the charges from the dock.

For Second Class passengers: aft on "B" and "C" decks—and for Third Class passengers: aft on "D" deck. The Second Class cabins on "B" deck can on occasion be rapidly converted into First Class staterooms.

CHINESE Y.M.C.A.

PRESENTATION TO MR. J.
L. McPHERSON.

The staff of the Chinese Y.M.C.A. gave a tea party yesterday in honour of Mr. J. L. McPherson on the occasion of his twenty-fifth anniversary as General Secretary.

In making the presentation of a beautiful lacquered desk set, Mr. T. Moffat emphasised the fact that Mr. McPherson had throughout shown the deepest understanding and sympathy towards the young men and boys in the Colony, encouraging among them healthy recreation, team work, responsibility and excellent esprit de corps, for all of which the members and staff would hold him in grateful memory.

Mr. McPherson responded in a brief speech, assuring the staff that he felt very appreciative not only of the exquisite gift but also the sense of gratefulness evinced among those with whom he worked. He found it a source of un-failing pleasure to continue to associate himself with the aims and objects of the Chinese Y.M.C.A.

KAYE DON'S EFFORT.

CAR TO BE CHRISTENED AT DAYTONA.

Daytona Beach, Mar. 14.
Talkie cinematographers from all over the country are crowding the famous racing beach to film the christening ceremony of Kaye Don's giant car, the "Silver Bullet," to-day, by Don's sister, Mrs. Rita Livesay, after which a preliminary test will be run off immediately.

Kaye Don hitherto has not driven the car one foot. He intends to limit his speed to 140 miles an hour, preparatory to his attempt on the world record when the tide and beach are suitable, probably early next week.

Kaye Don is very satisfied with the mechanical perfection of the car, which is theoretically capable of 250 to 260 miles an hour, and declares: "My only concern now is a perfect beach."—Reuter's American Service.

MASTERS' & MATES' EXAMINATIONS.

PROCEDURE IN CASE OF FAILURES.

LOCAL RULE REVISED.

It is notified in the Gazette that Rules 13 and 14 of the rules relating to the examination of masters and mates in the Mercantile Marine made by the Governor-in-Council and published in Government Notification No. 363 in the Gazette of the 21st November, 1913, are rescinded, and the following rule is substituted therefor:

Candidates for any grade of certificate will proceed to the oral examination irrespective of whether they have passed or failed in their written work.

Where a candidate passes in the written portion of the examination and fails in the oral, or vice versa, his pass in that portion in which he has satisfied the examiners will hold good for a period of six months from the date of the examination. If he does not pass the remainder of the examination within this period he will again be required to be examined both in the written and in the oral portions. The Governor may in exceptional circumstances decide to extend the period up to a limit of one year.

In the case of a second failure or any subsequent failure in the written or in the oral portion of the examination, or in both, an interval of two months must elapse from the date of the last failure before a candidate can be re-examined. No further penalty will be imposed save in those cases where the examiner considers further sea service necessary. This sea service will not exceed six months.

This rule shall come into operation on the 1st day of March, 1930.

ARMY MEN ENTERTAIN THE NAVY.

ENJOYABLE EVENING AT THE R.A. MESS.

The Garrison Sergeants were at home to their comrades of the Senior service, and other friends, in the Garrison Mess, Queen's Road last night, when an enjoyable evening was spent in song and story.

The Committee were fortunate in securing the services of Mr. Mohammed Kassim and Mr. Sid Clarke of the "High Steppers," the former in baritone songs and "Digger" stories and Mr. Clarke in violin selections. The other contributors in a long and interesting programme were E. R. A. Caynes, H.M.S. Bridgewater; Shipwright Ryder, H.M.S. Bridgewater; S/Sgt. Hedson, R.A.S.C.; C. P. O. Wootton, H.M.S. Seraph; P. O. Yexley, H.M.S. Marazion; S.Q.M.S. Blythe, R.A.P.C.; Sgt. Johnson, Royal Marines; P. O. Leclerc, H.M.S. Seraph; P. O. Kendall, H.M.S. Herald; R.Q.M.S. McGill, 93rd Highlanders; C. P. O. Haynes, H.M.S. Bridgewater.

Conviviality and good cheer kept up the proceedings until midnight, the gathering then regretfully breaking up. The success of last night's entertainment augurs well for future functions of the same kind which, it is hoped, will become a regular feature of the mess.

TEARFUL CHINESE IN COURT.

OBSTRUCTION CHARGE WHICH FAILED.

A Chinese who was easily moved to tears was taken before Mr. Grantham at the Central Magistracy to-day, charged by an Indian policeman with having caused an obstruction by depositing his stall on the footpath.

The defendant wept copiously as he told a sad story of how he lost his signboard and was overcome by the disaster. "I let down my load so that I might be able to wipe the tears from my eyes when this Indian caught hold of me."

The Magistrate accepted the story and discharged the defendant.

The case of a Chinese girl, who was yesterday sentenced to four months' imprisonment for the larceny of $1,500, was this morning reviewed by Mr. Lindsell at the Central Magistracy, when he said he had reconsidered his judgment, and decided that he would not send her to gaol if there were other means of dealing with her. He had therefore decided to remand her in police custody until Tuesday next, when she would be sent to the Secretary for Chinese Affairs.

The Statistical Branch of the Imports and Exports office, at Beaconsfield Arcade is to be opened on April 1st.

NANKING TENSION INCREASES.

BUSY PREPARING FOR HOSTILITIES.

TWO GENERALS MAY REVERT TO KUOMINCHUN.

SHANTUNG CRITICAL.

Shanghai, Mar. 14. The possibility of further civil war in the North China, consequent on the postponement of Marshal Yen Hsi-shan's retirement, is confirmed by reliable sources, Marshal Yen being understood to be determined to form an alliance with Marshal Feng Yu-hsiang, who is directing the mobilisation of the Kuominchun forces at Tungkwang.

Tension at Nanking was heightened yesterday upon receipt of a cable from General Han Fuchu and General Shih Yu-shan who asked for funds from the National Government. As the Nanking Government is understood not to be in a position to comply with the demands, it is probable that the two Generals will go over to the side of the Kuominchun, to whom they formerly owed allegiance.

Chiang to Take Charge.

Marshal Chiang Kai-shek has signified his intention to visit the Tientsin-Pukow Railway and personally to direct the coming operations against the Kuominchun insurgents. It is known that Marshal Chiang will be leaving Nanking for Hsuehchow soon.

General Ho Tsing-chun, Nationalist General Commanding the troops along the Peking-Hankow Railway, will leave Hankow tomorrow by aeroplane for Nanking, to confer with Marshal Chiang regarding the tactics to be adopted and the steps to be taken in the coming offensive on the Kuominchun forces along the Hupeh-Honan frontiers.

Troop movements between Tientsin and Changhsien are taking place and these have caused further apprehension among the populace. It is anticipated that when hostilities commence, the Nationalist forces along the Tientsin-Pukow Railway will make Tientsin their objective.

Troops Concentrating.

Several tanks have left Nanking for the upper section of the Tientsin-Pukow Railway. Hsuehchow, an important strategic position on the Tientsin-Pukow Railway, is the concentration point of thousands of Nationalist troops, including the First Nationalist Division under General Liu Chi.

Pukow, a port near Nanking, is the scene of much military activity and yesterday witnessed the arrival of two thousand Nationalist troops under General Ma Hung-kwei, who came from northern Anhui, following receipt of instructions to mobilise. He is ready to join in the war, taking the side of the National Government.

General Ma asks Marshal Chiang Kai-shek for $200,000 and 30,000 sacks of flour before his forces will leave Pukow for the front.

Shantung Crisis.

From Pukow to Shantung the railway line is within the sphere of influence of the Nationalist forces.

The situation in Shantung is most critical. The Military Governor, General Chan Tiao-yuan, is on a visit to Tehchow to supervise the fortification of the city, while Tsinanfu, (the capital of Shantung,) is under the control of General Koo Chu-tung, (who commands 30,000 Nationalist troops in Shantung).

Significant Movements.

Peking, Mar. 14. A message from Taiyuanfu states that all the Shansi General, who had gone to Taiyuanfu to hold a conference with Yen Hsi-shan, have returned to their commands, and it is feared at Taiyuanfu that hostilities may break out shortly, as Shih Yu-san continues to move northward, and Nanking troops continue to arrive at Tsinanfu. A further fifteen hundred men arrived there yesterday.

Shih Yu-san has gone from Chengchow to Hopen, and the Kuominchun forces are advancing from Tungkwang to Chengchow. It is anticipated at Taiyuanfu that they intend to occupy Chengchow, thus forcing Shih Yu-san's hand.

Lu Chung-lin and other Kuominchun Generals have telegraphed to Yen Hsi-shan expressing astonishment at his resignation, urging him to remain to strive night and day for the party and nation, and pledging their support to the very end.—Reuter.

THE TARIFF TRUCE QUESTION.

MR GRAHAM ACCEPTS FRENCH
COMPROMISE.

A YEAR'S OPERATION.

Geneva, Mar. 14. After discussions lasting little short of a month, the International Tariff Truce Conference is moving towards a compromise, thanks to the decision of Mr. William Graham, the President of the British of Trade, to accept a French proposal submitted as an alternative to Mr. Graham's plan for a two years' truce starting from October 1.

The French delegate proposed the continuation of the existing commercial treaties for one year, with the proviso that no new barriers should be erected within that period unless it was unavoidable and after an opportunity had been given for negotiations.

Mr. Graham assented to the proposal as the minimum which would satisfy him at the present time, and he recommended that it be applied in a liberal spirit.

Twenty-six European countries are represented at the Conference, while the Government of the United States while not participating, sent an observer.—Reuter.

LEGALISATION OF BETTING.

Credit Bets.

Clause 11 permits the settlement of credit bets within seven days at a place appointed by the certificate-holder and notice of the appointment is to be given to the prescribed officer, who may enter and inspect any such place.

Clause 12 provides a general penalty of Rs. 1,000 for all offences created by the Bill or by regulations made under it.

By clause 13, totalisator tax and betting tax may, on the conviction of the certificate-holder or authorised bookmaker for failure to make it over, be recovered as if it were a fine imposed by a Magistrate; and clause 14 gives the power to cancel a certificate of registration or a bookmaker's permit on conviction of the holder for an offence under the Bill or regulations, or in the case of the bookmaker, for breach of conditions of his permit.

Stewards Responsibility.

Clause 15 contains a provision with regard to cases where stewards of a racing club are a "certificate-holder." In such cases, every officer of the club will be equally guilty of an offence committed by the stewards, unless it was committed without his knowledge or consent, and acts required to be done by and money required to be paid to the stewards may be done by, and paid to the secretary of the club.

Clauses 16 and 17 relate to the making of regulations and the issue of search warrants.

The revenue which Government will derive from the introduction of a betting tax, according to the investments which went through the totalisators and Pari-Mutuels on the Colombo and Nawara Eliya course during the 1928-1929 season, will be approximately Rs. 250,000.

The profit earned by the C.T.C., whose commission amounts to 10 per cent, during the same period was Rs. 1,039,559.

ARMED ROBBERY REPORT.

AFFAIR IN KOWLOON THIS MORNING.

The police are investigating an affair described in a preliminary report as an armed robbery, which took place shortly after nine o'clock this morning.

Details are lacking as to the number of men concerned in the affair or the value of the goods stolen, but it is disclosed that it took place on the first floor of No. 472, Nathan Road, and that the robbers escaped before an alarm was given.

Resistance was encountered in the course of the attempt, and the victim, a male Chinese, was struck and subsequently bound and gagged.

Police officers found the victim in an unconscious condition when they arrived on the premises and had him removed to hospital.

FAIR WEATHER.

The local weather forecast till noon to-morrow is as follows:—N. E. winds, moderate; fair.
